BEAUTIES WILL TURN FARMERS

Peggy Wood, the Stage Star, Opens Summer Camp for Chorus Girls in Stamford

New York, May 14.—The first farm ever given over exclusively to chorus girls, where they may romp and play and dig to their hearts' content, is Buddiebrook Farm at North Stamford, Ct. Peggy Wood, star of "The Clinging Vine," is the owner of the property. She will house at least 30 girls this Summer.

"Should there be lack of housing room I shall erect tents for the overflow," said Miss Wood.

The opening of Buddiebrook is scheduled for May 28.

WILL DON SUNBONNETS.

"There are dear and 'possum and snakes and everything wild up on my farm," Miss Wood said. "In sunbonnets' khaki breeches and gingham aprons those who accept my hospitality will lead the simple life of real country girls. It will be so much nicer than suffocating in hall bedrooms off Broadway.

"Besides the thirty acres in the farm there are hundreds of wild, wooded acres surrounding it where the girls can roam. My guests may run the farm just as they wish. They may choose their own manner of housekeeping, selecting cooks from among themselves, if they like.

"There have been chorus girl Summer camps before, but never successful ones, because they were patronized by wealthy persons and the girls felt as if they were accepting charity. No visitors will be allowed in this camp except friends of the girls."

HOE OWN GARDENS.

Raising chickens, splitting rails, churning, making preserves, picking wild berries, hoeing in the garden, feeding the pigs and even killing rattlesnakes will be some of the diversions that await the inhabitants of Buddiebrook.

Miss Wood's farm is twenty miles north of Stamford, but if the farmerettes get up bright and early and do their "chores" they can catch the country bus to the station and reach Broadway before matinee time.

"The Clinging Vine" is expected to run through June so the girls in that company will have to plan on catching the bus.

U.S. German Women Urge Workers to Rebuild France

Washington, May 14.—The German section of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom has issued a plea to the German people on reconstruction in northern France, saying: The French ruins have not been rebuilt because the "French and German industrialists quarrel about the profits of the work," and the "militarists of both sides use the subject to stir up the people."

"German people," the message read, "pull yourselves together!

"In the hour of extremity, form yourselves into workable units and go out with hammers and saws and begin the work of reconstruction. You will be welcome over there. In spite of all opposition, let us follow the call, for in reconstruction by us lies salvation for all."

FIRE BARES ROMANCE; 2 HURT

The injury of a four-year-old boy and his foster father today in a two-alarm fire at the Simon Street Stephen Antique Shop, No. 910 North Shore road, Revere, revealed a shattered romance, a kidnaping and the adoption of the youngster to take the place of the lost child.

Eleven persons were driven to the street, three buildings were fired, scores of cottages were threatened and damage of an unknown amount was caused.

Repeated blowing of the Revere fire whistle, audible for ten miles, gave rise to reports of a conflagration and caused a large crowd to gather.

CARRY BOY TO SAFETY.

The adopted boy, Earl, was lying in bed on the second floor over the antique shop watching a window curtain flutter in the breeze. Sudden-

MRS. HAYES IN BIG OIL 'SWINDLE'

"Asbestos King" Manville Was Singed in Deal With "Slick Gang," He Charges

Another great financial name has been drawn into the case involving the operations of Mrs. Myrtle Bowman Hayes of Boston, indicted on a forgery charge.

Charles B. Manville, asbestos king, was singed by Mrs. Hayes and the group of men and women operating with her.

According to the story told by the aged founder of the Johns-Manville Company, one of the greatest in the country, he was drawn into a $2,000,000 oil deal, and his name was used without authority in the sale of stock. He got out of the deal after taking a loss, but long after he withdrew his name was being used.

ANOTHER WOMAN IN DEAL

Mrs. Cora Stetson Butler figures prominently in this phase of the Hayes case. Manville characterized the outfit as "a slick crowd" and admits he was trimmed through the wiles of bejewelled women wearing expensive gowns and living in high styles in the best hotels in town.

Mrs. Hayes took the lead in the deal.

The latest disclosure of her alleged financial freebooters finding her as one of the prime movers in the Century Consolidated Oil Company fraud, for which six of her alleged associates are now awaiting trial on an indictment by a New York Federal Grand Jury.

From coast to coast the practically worthless stock of this concern was unloaded on the public and much of it is today held by investors in Boston and New England. The bubble burst about a year ago, but Mrs. Hayes escaped indictment.

USED HIS NAME

Manville met Mrs. Hayes socially like Charles M. Schwab did. When Manville was summoned before the Federal Grand Jury that indicted her associates he was dumfounded to learn that the literature of the company described him as its president.

Among other amazing things that

SHIP SEIZED BY CHINESE PIRATES

Hong Kong, May 14 (By the Associated Press).—European passengers were among those terrorized and robbed when the Chinese steamer Taiban was seized near Swatow, Saturday, by pirates, who, disguised as passengers, overpowered the crew, sailed the ship for nearly twenty-four hours at night without lights, and finally left her at the mouth of a small creek, transferring to a junk loot valued at $60,000.

The Taishun, which was bound from Hong Kong for Shanghai, returned to Hong Kong after the raid. The chief officer, wounded in the forearm by a pirate, was taken to a hospital. Most of the passengers had lost all their money and personal effects. The vessel's cargo, a valuable one, was not disturbed.

The steamer, which registers 2,600 tons, left Hong Kong with more than one hundred passengers. The pirate passengers numbered about forty.

When a point near Swatow was reached, they rushed the armory, obtaining all the equipment there. The crew was taken by surprise. The captain and the officers and the European passengers were locked up together in the capain's cabin, where they were compelled to remain until the pirates left the ship.

A large number of Chinese passengers, panic-stricken, were herded into the hold after they had been searched and their valuables stolen.

Shanghai, May 14.—Release of the prisoners held by the Chinese bandits in the Shantung hills is expected at once as the result of an agreement with the brigands by representatives of the Peking government, said a dispatch from Hsieng today.

Eight prisoners have already been released, according to reports received here.

The Peking government agreed to withdraw the troops and to enroll the bandits in the national army. The bandit leaders said that they were satisfied but wished to see the agreement signed before th enatives were liberated. There are still two women among the prisoners, one of them being the wife of Manuel Veres, a wealthy Mexican.

FORMER MAYOR OF PITTSFIELD GONE

Pittsfield, May 14.—George W. Faulkner, former mayor and former representative to the Legislature, has been missing since Saturday morning at 10 o'clock and the police have been asked to search for him.

He drew $350 from the bank Saturday morning, presumably for pay roll purposes, he being in the lumber business, but he has not been seen since then. The police say he has been nervous for some time. He has a wife and several children.

B. & M. CONDUCTOR SOLD DRUGS; JAILED

Charles F. Adams, a sixty-three-year-old conductor on the Fitchburg division of the Boston & Maine railroad, pleaded guilty in Superior Court today to selling cocaine on April 25.

Because of his age and lack of previous record, District Attorney O'Brien pleaded leniency for Adams.

Judge O'Connell sentenced Adams to nine months in the House of Correction. The police say he obtained cocaine in Canada and sold it here and took it to a drug agent.

FULLER CASE JUROR CHARGES 'BRIBERY'

New York, May 14.—Harold S. Fiedelman, an electrician who served on the jury which, at the third trial of Edward M. Fuller, broker accused of bucketing orders, was unable to reach a verdict last week, today told District Attorney Banton that he had been offered $1,000 to vote for an acquittal, but he refused. Biedelman will be called before a grand jury, Mr. Banton announced.

The istrict Aorney added that witnesses able to corroborate Biedelman's story, among them a woman, also would be supeonaed.

SIX LOSE LIVES ESCAPING DEATH

LAY 'POISON PEN' NOTES TO WOMAN

Friends Declare Maxwell Will Reveal Her Name When He Faces Grand Jury

New York, May 14.—A woman will be named as the suspected writer of the "poison pen" letters which George Maxwell, internationally known music publisher, has been charged with having written in defamation of Mrs. Allan A. Ryan, Mrs. Albert R. Gallatin and seven other socially prominent women in the last ten years, his friends announced today.

Maxwell's intimates rallying to his defence, declared that he had long suspected a woman of being the author of the "poison pen" missives, and said that they expected him to give her name to District Attorney Banton on his arrival here.

RECEIVED LETTERS HIMSELF.

Maxwell has announced in London that he will return here immediately to face the indictments found against him.

FRIENDSHIP WITH MRS. HAYES COST MANUFACTURER HEAVILY

'ASBESTOS KING'S' NAME USED BY 'SLICK GANG' OF WOMEN IN OIL STOCK SALES

Manville learned was that Mrs. Hayes had been representing herself as his former secretary and business adviser and had been calling at the asbestos man's office with him as she did on the wife of Schwab.

"To quote Manville directly, she was 'like the watchtower on the road from Jericho to Jerusalem. I fell among thieves and I was beautifully trimmed.'"

WORKED WITH WOMAN

The "thieves" he refers to were the oil stock sales now under indictment consisting of Mrs. Clara Stetson Butler of New York, Walter S. Clarke of Boston, Marks H. Matthews of New York, Horace D. Dawson of New York, Duke D. Peters of Los Angeles and Ernest S. Pulliam of Bethany, Okla.

"Mrs. Hayes was a member of a gang which is one of the richest in the counterfeit gang that used my name to steal millions of dollars from the public," Manville declared.

The aged manufacturer said that he met Mrs. Hayes when she was living at the Waldorf in New York, where he also met Mrs. Butler. She told him that she had been a lawyer for Marshall Field & Company and greatly impressed him with her business ability.

SPOKE OF SCHWAB

"She often spoke of her friendship with Charles M. Schwab," he said, "and having no occasion to doubt her, I did not investigate.

"Mrs. Butler is a beautiful Titian haired woman of thirty. They were both clever and they both worked me.

"At this time Mrs. Hayes was selling stock for Clarke, Hansen & Company, who had a boilerroom office at Madison avenue and Forty-first street.

"My acquaintance with Clarke began in a rather casual way. A short time after this, Clarke called and introduced himself to me. He told me his concern was floating a wonderful proposition and would like to have me invest. He said that up in Worcester Mass., there was a very old, very respectable concern called the Hobbs Manufacturing Company.

SIGNS $25,000 NOTE

"Mr. Hobbs, Clarke said, had spent the latter years of his life perfecting a wonderful automatic slot machine. He said that Hobbs needed money and that the National Machine Sales Company had been organized to sell stock.

"I became interested but pledged no money. Soon Clarke called on me again. He told me he had interested another group of capitalists, but they demanded assurance that the concern was afloat. He said he wanted permission to use my name as a financial backer. He asked me to sign an accommodation note for $25,000. He said he wanted to show the paper to the other prospects and promised he would return the note to me within three hours.

ADVANCED MORE MONEY

"This was the first big mistake. I signed the note. Clarke left. The afternoon the Guaranty Trust Company called up my son, H. E. Manville, and asked what I was good for now. They said H. E. Clarke had appeared and discounted the note.

"Mr. Hobbs was an honest man and had a beautiful plant. But he was pressed for cash and had fallen into bad hands just as I had. Neither of us knew it then. The game went on. I advanced other sums, not as much as the amount involved in the Schwab case, but enough—a total loss."

"I did not learn that they were using my name to sell stock until I was called before the Federal Grand Jury a year ago," Mr. Manville continued. "I made the same statement then that I am making now. Mrs. Hayes was not indicted with the others, but she was as big a factor in the oil deal as she was in the Worcester proposition.

URGED BY WOMEN.

"I consistently refused to have anything to do with this oil proposition, although they used my name as president of Clarke, Hansen & Co., on the letter heads they sent out in selling stock.

"Mrs. Butler and Mrs. Hayes both tried to inveigle me into investing in this deal, but I resisted them. Once when I met Mrs. Butler on the street, she asked why I did not come to see her. I told her that I was afraid, and that was the truth. Now I wish I had gone to her office. Then I would have seen my name listed as president of their concern, and I would have protested.

Mr. Manville said that the group who had taken him in were confidence men and women of the [illegible] type, who lived at the best hotels, were the most expensive clothes and jewels, rode about in limousines with liveried chauffeurs, frequented fashionable Summer and Winter resorts, and mingled with persons of wealth and social standing. He said that they used the contests with persons like himself to impress people with the soundness of their propositions.

Women who were at the same time chic and keen business women used, he said, not only to sell stock but also to appeal to the vanity of such men as himself.

TIED UNDER SINK BY STEPMOTHER, HE SAYS

EIGHT-YEAR-OLD GEORGE ADAMS
Lynn boy held by Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children pending trial of his father and stepmother on charges of abuse and neglect.

BOY TAKEN FROM PARENTS WANTS 'NEW MAMA'

"My new mama didn't love me. That's why she kept me tied up under the kitchen sink and never gave me any pennies or anything."

Sniffs and tears punctuated this explanation by George Adams, eight-year-old son of Minnie Adams, No. 28A Lacoma street, Lynn, of the maltreatment he says he received at the hands of his stepmother. The boy says he never wants to go home again because "I'm afraid of."

George is one of five children in the Adams family. He has a brother thirteen years old, two half-sisters, one and two years old, and an infant sister.

PARENTS AWAIT HEARING

Mr. and Mrs. Adams were released on $600 bail by Judge Reeve in Lynn Court, to appear before him on May 21 on charges of abuse and neglect of their child, George. The child was trussed up and left under the kitchen sink for four days for taking a two-dollar bill from a can where Mrs. Adams kept loose change, it is charged.

"I really don't belong to her. That's why she never puts her arms around me or took me in her lap," George told a Boston American reporter at the home of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

"I ain't a bad kid, like she says I am. Ask my teacher—she never said I was bad, she likes me.

"Mama didn't give me any breakfast because she said I stayed out too late. I was only playing in the back yard.

"Then Mr. Gordon came—he's from school. He asked her where I was, and she told him I was under the sink, and that she wouldn't let me go to school.

WANTS NEW MOTHER

"She took me out from under the sink when daddy came home, because she had to, but she didn't give me anything to eat, and when he went to work she tied me up and put me under the sink again.

Then, child-like, George changed the subject.

"I'm going to be a cook when I grow up," he announced. "Then I'll bet you I'll have enough to eat. And I'll give all the kids all the pies and cakes they want. I won't be stingy. Just you wait and see."

REVERE FIRE REVEALS A ROMANCE

ly this burst into flame as it dropped on top an oil stove.

The child screamed, "Papa, there's a fire." As he cried clouds of smoke filled the bed chamber and billowed downstairs, where St. Stephen was telephoning to his wife in Boston, and where Mrs. Sidney Horner and Thomas Ward were at work.

Mrs. Horner started to help the boy. She was driven back by a burst of fire and smoke. The foster father, dropping the received, raced up the stairs and then staggered to the street with the youngster. The latter's clothes were ablaze.

St. Stephen was burned about the face and neck. The child was burned about the head, neck and arms. Neither is seriously injured.

MANY COTTAGES BURN

Flames reaching out ignited houses on either side. Mr. and Mrs. James A. Place, their daughter, Evelyn, and Mrs. Robert Carron were forced out when the roof of their home took fire.

By the time the fire apparatus arrived, the St. Stephen shop and the Fitzgerald cottage, on the left, were in flames. Both were almost burned to the ground.

The wind carried sparks among the thickly grouped cottages stretching to either side and it was feared the firemen would be unable to prevent others from catching fire. Volunteers helped stamp out burning embers.

Fire officials estimated the actual property loss on the St. Stephen and Fitzgerald buildings at $1,500 each and $400 on the Place home. The amount of damage to the contents of the St. Stephen shop could not be estimated.

FIRE REVEALS ROMANCE.

While St. Stephen and his wife were comforting the child at the home of Mrs. Jennie Horner, No. 11 Elleston street, they told how their daughter had been deserted by her husband shortly after she became a mother and how the girl had later died from a broken heart.

"We adopted our grandson," said Mr. St. Stephen. "He was with us quite a while and we grew to love him as we had his mother. Then one day some man carried him off.

"We heard later that our grandson had been taken to his father. We were heart broken. We found little Earl and he reminded us so much of our lost youngster that we took him home."

The St. Stephens adopted another child, Anthony, twelve, who was at school with their own boy, Morris.

Mayor Curley Asks Each Wednesday Be Sugarless

"Sugarless Wednesday" will appear on the Boston calendar, beginning on Wednesday of this week.

Mayor Curley has requested that on that day of the week, in support of the nation-wide effort to reduce the needless high cost of sugar, the consumers throughout Greater Boston reduce their consumption of sugar to a minimum or entirely do without it. He also requests restaurants and hotels to co-operate.

"Sugarless Monday" has been inaugurated in New York by Mayor Hylan following the refusal of the Circuit Court of Appeals to grant the plea of the government to close the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange.

PROBE WIDENS TO ANOTHER BOY'S DEATH

Chicago, May 13.—The Grand Jury today was to resume investigation of the disappearance of Leighter Mount, Northwestern University freshman, and the finding a week ago under an Evanston pier of a skeleton identified by Mrs. Mount as that of her son.

For the first time girl students of the university will be questioned.

The inquiry, it is admitted, has developed nothing tangible after a week's effort. Mount disappeared after an interclass fight twenty months ago.

Broadening its investigation, the State's attorney's office has delved into the death of Louis Aubere, Northwestern freshman, killed three weeks ago in an automobile accident, and announces that it is prepared to ask the grand jury for manslaughter indictments.

Assistant State's Attorney Barbare says he has evidence that Aubere's death occurred during a hazing episode when the automobile in which the student was riding was driven at another student car for the purpose of ramming it.

DEFEND 'LOVE RIVAL' OF MOTHER

Rail Men Ask Raise of $150,000,000

HEART BALM OF $100,000 IS DEMANDED

While their mother accuses a sixty-year-old Cambridge woman of stealing the affections of her husband the children say: "She always seemed such a nice woman."

MRS. HECKMAN AND CHILDREN

Mrs Lenora G. Marvin of No. 986 Charles River road, is accused by Mrs. Flora Heckman in a $100,000 suit. Her children are Hazel Elizabeth, fifteen, and Raymond, fourteen.

LOVE SUIT PUZZLE TO CHILDREN

Don't Know What to Make of Mother's Accusations Against Woman of 60

Hazel Elizabeth Heckman fifteen years old, of No. 5 Hancock place, Cambridge, doesn't quite know what to make of it all. Neither does her younger brother, Raymond, fourteen.

Their mother, Mrs. Flora Heckman, thirty-eight, has filed suit for $100,000 against Mrs. Leora G. Marvin, sixty, of No. 986 Charles River road, alleging alienation of the affections of her husband, John M. Heckman. They were married seventeen years ago.

The children, since the separation of their parents, three years ago, have been living with their mother at the Hancock place address. But two or three days each week they have been visiting their father at his address, No. 459 Massachusetts avenue.

While her mother goes to her work at the plant of the Hood Rubber Company in Watertown each day, Hazel Elizabeth helps keep the house for the family after her school hours at the Cambridge Latin School.

"I don't know what to make of it," Hazel Elizabeth confessed. "Raymond and I are both very fond of father. He contributes $15 a week to our support. And Mrs. Marvin seems to be such a nice woman, too. When I was sick she came to see me."

Raymond expresses a similar affection for his father and the woman charged by their mother with stealing Heckman's love.

Mrs. Marvin, according to Mrs. Heckman, is a woman of considerable wealth. She is the mother of Dr. Frank Marvin, whose wife, Florence Ledden Marvin, recently sued for divorce.

2 DEAD, 13 HURT IS WEEK-END AUTO TOLL

Two-year-old Daniel Sheehan of No. 45 Webber street, Roxbury, died at City Hospital today from a puncture of one lung and broken ribs received when he was run over by an automobile.

This brought the week-end motor toll for Boston and the State up to a total of two dead and thirteen hurt. Seven of the victims were children. Both fatalities were those of two year-olds.

The other child killed was Mary, two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Craig of No. 13 Jackson street, Salem. She was being wheeled along Flint street in that city.

When Miss Anna Rose of No. 21 Pacific street, Lynn, who was learning to drive an automobile, turned the machine into Flint street from Federal, she apparently lost control of it.

The machine jumped the curbing and ran into the baby carriage, fatally crushing its occupant.

Both Miss Rose and her companion, Paul E. Genereaux of East Lynn, were arrested on a charge of manslaughter.

In Danvers, ten persons barely escaped death and three were injured when a touring car driven by Louis Gilman of No. 84 North street, Medford Hillside, barely averted crashing head-on into a car owned by S. K. Hosmer of No. 636 Chatham street, Gloucester, and driven by Walter S. Gibbons of No. 108 Ash street, Reading.

POISONING OF THREE IS SUSPECTED

Wife's Brother Dead, Police Probe Demise of Husband's Parents

Newark, N. J., May 14.—While Mrs. John Creighton and her husband were held today, charged with the poisoning of Charles Raymond Avery, the woman's eighteen-year-old brother, Prosecutor John O. Bigelow expected to obtain permission to exhume the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Creighton, parents of John Creighton.

Young Avery, it is alleged, died April 20, after a ten-day illness, marked by recurrent nausea, and the State contends his death was due to arsenic poisoning.

The elder Creighton died in December, 1920, and his wife in September of the following year. Bigelow said he wanted to learn if the causes of the aged couple's deaths were properly diagnosed.

Mrs. Creighton is the beneficiary to a life insurance policy which Bigelow says he was instrumental in obtaining. Creighton and his wife pleaded not guilty to the charge and were held for trial June 18.

Avery's death was ascribed to heart disease, but an anonymous letter suggested another cause of death. Examination of his vitals showed traces of poisoning.

The authorities were reported to be more than ever convinced that Avery had been given comparatively large doses of a patent medicine solution taken by women in minute quantities to clear complexions. The base of this preparation is arsenic.

If Mrs. Creighton did poison her brother the police believe it was to get $17,000 in insurance and real estate which would accrue to her.

DEMANDS ARE HEARD BY BOARD

Reappointment of Two Members by Harding Allows Arbiters to Resume Work

Chicago, May 14.—Virtually at a standstill for a month, the United States Railroad Labor Board resumes functioning today, facing, reports from railroad labor circles indicate, a concerted drive by the unions for increases in wages that may total $150,000,000 or more annually.

Since April 15, when terms of three of its members expired, the board has been unable to decide disputes before it as the vacancies were not filled until last Friday when President Harding re-appointed R. M. Barton of Memphis, Tenn., and Horace Baker, and named E. F. Grable of Detroit, former head of the Maintenance of Way organization, to fill the vacant labor post.

The first of several docketed wage disputes in which a decision is expected is the Philadelphia & Reading case.

Certain classes of employes have asked for a ten per cent. increase in addition to restoration of the wage rates in effect prior to the cut of July 1 last, retroactive to that date.

SEIZE BRITISH SHIP AS RUM-RUNNER

Miami, Fla., May 14.—The Esther Gray, a British schooner of about eighteen tons, from Nassau, Bahamas, has been seized by the revenue cutter Vidette off Triumph reef and held on a charge of violating the United States customs regulations. Capt. in R. S. Miller of the Vidette said the schooner was seized within the three-mile limit with a cargo of liquor aboard estimated at about 800 cases. Two shots were fired across the schooner's bow, he said, before she hove to.

BODY IN WATER 2 DAYS IS RECOVERED

The body of an unidentified man was recovered from the water at T wharf today. There were no signs of violence. The body had been in the water about two days. It was taken to Constitution wharf. The body was that of a man about 45 years of age, five feet five inches in height and weighing 145 pounds. He had a gray beard and mustache and wore a long rubber coat, white shirt, turned down collar, blue wolen socks and black, laced shoes.

LONDON TO HAVE AERIAL PULLMAN

London, May 14—Plans for an aerial Pullman are being examined by British aircraft authorities. A great, slim, metal saloon, like a long, tapering Pullman car, is the basis of the idea.

Covered with smooth, gleaming sheaths of a featherweight metal alloy, this great air coach will be designed to rest on a long framework which will have wheels like a railway coach.

The conveyance, which will have day and night accommodation, will run on ordinary railway tracks and will be backed into a railway station to receive its passengers. When they are aboard an engine will take it to an aerdrome outside a city, where, shedding its rail wheels, the car will be transferred into an airplane.

FIND REMAINS OF 2 MISSING AIRMEN

San Diego, Cal., May 14.—Remains of two men found on Cuyamaca Mountain, near the engine and fragments of an airplane, were positively identified as those of Colonel Francis H. Marshall and Lieutenant Charles Webber, whose fate has been a mystery since they left here December 7 on a flight to Tucson, Arizona. The skulls of both the officers were crushed and other bones were broken, indicating both died instantly after the fatal crash.

GAINSBORO ST. FIRE LOSS $2,500

Fire starting in a tailor shop on the second floor of a three-story brick building at No. 42 Gainsborough street, forced six people to flee to the street early today.

It was discovered by a passenger of an outbound Huntington avenue car, who noticed the flames burning along the wall of the building. When the apparatus arrived the firemen found the fire had gained considerable headway. Damage was estimated at $2,500.

LOOMFIXERS STRIKE, THROWING 1,500 OUT

Warren, R. I., May 14.—Because the management refused to discharge two non-union loomfixers, the other workers in that department of the Warren Manufacturing Company's cotton mill here refused to work today and forced the entire plant to shut down. Approximately 1,500 persons were affected by the closing.

GIRL WHO FLED CULT READY TO TESTIFY

St. Joseph, Mich., May 14—Esther Widders of Mansfield, O., who recently fled from the House of David colony, was among the witnesses whiting summons today before the grand jury investigating charges of immorality in the cult. She was brought back here by Attorney-General Dougherty, who abruptly terminated last week's session of the grand jury by his unexpected departure to the girl's home.

HOTEL REGISTER CLEW IN WALL ST. BLAST

By International News Service.

New York, May 14.—With Noah Leemer, latest suspect in the Wall street explosion of September 16, 1920, which killed thirty-nine persons, held in the Tombs without bail, detectives today were seeking a hotel register, which they said might throw some light on the young radical's movements about the time of the explosion.

Lerner, who went to Russia with "Big Bill" Haywood, according to the police, went to the hotel in question the night before the explosion. Probably a dozen other radicals went to the same hotel that night, police said, and they are trying to learn from the little group held a meeting and what their subsequent movements were.

PUBLISHERS ALLOW FREE BROADCAST

New York, May 14 (By Cosmopolitan News Service)—Many of the largest music publishing houses today announced they would permit music to be broadcast free from radio stations. This action was taken after the Music Publishers' Association had advised its members to do so owing to the "chaotic and experimental" state of radio broadcasting. The action comes on the heels of the decision by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, that the radio stations must pay a license fee to use copyrighted music.

ARRAIGN 2 RUNAWAY SWAMPSCOTT GIRLS

Mary Piccarello, seventeen, of No. 111 Belmont avenue, Swampscott, and Anna Bonevento, of No. 44 Belmont avenue, Swampscott, arrested in a Salem hotel early today, were arraigned in Lynn Court on charges of being runaway girls. Warrants were issued against two men charging them with abduction. The girls disappeared Saturday.

CHILD TELLS OF MURDER AND SUICIDE

The story of a three-year-old child gave the police the only explanation they have of a double shooting in Somerville which resulted in the death of Manuel T. Ferrira, thirty-eight years old, and his sister-in-law, Mrs. Joseph J. Ferrira, forty-three years old, of No. 423 Medford street, Somerville.

To the police officer who held her in his arms, Mary, the adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Ferrira, the only witness of the tragedy, tried to tell what happened.

Reconstructing the child's story, and dove-tailing it with the evidence at hand, authorities believe Manuel shot to death his brother's wife, and then turned the weapon upon himself with fatal effect.

cover action which was being considered.

The three children are John Henry Nichols, Jr., eleven years and nine months old; Margaret, seven and Barbara Ruth, six.

It was for possession of the two girls that the battle at Camp Margaret was fought and won by the other's cohorts.

Attorney Richardson said Mrs. Nichols was frantic to get somewhere where the two little girls were safe today, that she feared her they had been taken out of the State. The girls were at the Nichols' country, Wellesley Hills this morning guarded by three detectives.

Declaring that he had been misled by detectives, Attorney Richardson continued:

"Every message that arrived at his office near the scene of battle was received by the wrong man.

CALLS IT "BANDITRY."

The lawyer characterized the raid of Camp Margaret as "nothing less than high-handed banditry."

He asserted that he would see Nichols for the wages of Chauffeur C. Foster, the chauffeur of Fosters, who was refused the last time he asked Nichols for his pay.

Nichols and Ruth Buckingham were married July 22, 1916. Miss Buckingham, Attorney Richardson asserted, did not wish to marry the wealthy wool man, but was persuaded to against her will by her mother.

The governess, who was on the side of Mrs. Nichols during the battle of Camp Margaret in Billerica is Miss Lillian Ferguson. She is engaged to be married next month to Foster, the chauffeur.

WIFE MAN MATLE.

The battle, a veritable cave man, primitive affair with "nothing barred," was won in the struggle de. Nichols and the detectives they took away the battle prize, he two Nichols children, Margaret nd Barbara.

Mrs. Nichols was knocked out he says her husband gave her the o. Today she sent a warrant or the arrest of Nichols and his tective army.

Foster, the chauffeur, received a roken nose and a fearful pounding in a battle against four detectives.

Miss Ferguson, the governess, got own to first principles when two tectives fought her for possession little Barbara. The governess hit e of the detectives on the hand.

Even the innocent children, terrfi S objects of this savage clash, did t escape injury.

TORY OF THE BATTLE.

All this took place in a cottage known as Camp Margaret in Billerica Whither Mrs. Nichols had fled. The camp was wrecked.

The story of the battle is told today through the Boston American by Mrs. Nichols, Foster and Miss Ferguson.

Today's statements are the first they have made since they left the Nichols home last week.

Nichols contents with a different story. He says he asked Mrs. Nichols to leave the camp that she became where the two little girls were playing, that she feared her they had been taken out of the State. The girls were at the Nichols' country, Wellesley Hills this morning guarded by three detectives.

WRECKED IN STRUGGLE

CONRAD P. RICHARDSON

Lawyer for Mrs. Nichols. Detectives trailed him to Billerica cottage.

CAMP MARGARET

Billerica cottage where Mrs. Ruth B. Nichols, chauffeur and governess battled John H. Nichols and his detectives for possession of the Nichols children.

"I went to the camp accompanied by several private detectives, I continued Mrs. Nichols, I said:

"Ruth, you are in a bad mess. Come away from it all. You are the mother of my children and I will provide a home for you. If you do not want to come to Wellesley I will get another home for you."

But Mrs. Nichols, according to her husband, became abusive and Foster entered the room and drew a pistol.

CLAIMS SHE FELL.

At that, Nichols said, the detectives disarmed Foster while Nichols took one of the children and a detective the other. When the children had been put in the automobile and the car had started down the road, Mrs. Nichols started to run after it. She stumbled in the road, Nichols declared, and cut her face.

But the disarming of Foster and the taking of the children involved much more, according to the wife's adherents, than the simple description given by Nichols.

The husband arrived, accompanied by men from the Robert J. Burns Detective Agency of No. 1 Beacon street.

When the raiders first entered the cottage Foster waved an automatic pistol, saying:

"Mrs. Nichols has asked me to protect her and I am going to do it."

BATTLE IS ON

A detective pulled a revolver on Foster. The chauffeur swung his own weapon toward Nichols with warning:

"Go ahead and shoot. This gun will go off at the least shock in me. If I am hit, Nichols will get his."

The detective held his fire. But another detective clumped Foster from the rear and a battle like a movie thriller was on.

It was four detectives to one chauffeur, but Foster fought like a demon. Chairs were broken, tables overturned, a bathtub was smashed.

They rolled around and around. Foster's coat was ribboned. His nose was beaten. The chauffeur battled on, fighting desperately to stand off the overpowering odds.

In another room two detectives were fighting Miss Ferguson for possession of little Barbara. The loyal governess clasped Barbara in her breast and opposed her feminine force to the powerful men.

One of the detectives in endeavoring to put one of his hands within reach of the governess' mouth, for a finish Miss Ferguson fastened her teeth in the hand. The detective wrenched free a lacerated hand.

Finally the two men pinned Miss Ferguson's arms behind her and tore Barbara away. In the struggle the little girl was thrown to the floor. One of her hands was badly cut.

Foster's own story, corroborating that of Nichols charges against detectives.

FOSTER'S VERSION.

"I was struggling on the floor to get up, away from the detectives, to go to the assistance of Miss Ferguson. I saw her fall back on her head and then saw the giant negro woman that she is work over me. I came back to her feet. Then I saw Miss Ferguson fastened her teeth in her hand. I saw her bring a knife to her throat. Then I saw Nichols take one of the children and go out to the automobile with it.

I saw her bring a knife to her throat. Then I saw Nichols take one of the children and go out to the automobile with it.

"I want to say right now that there has never been anything wrong between Mrs. Nichols and me. I always regarded her as my employer and I kept in my place as such.

"It was at the specific orders of Mr. Nichols that I showed his wife the possible courtesy. One of the standing orders was that she should, at all times, have preference of my services, even though he had given prior orders. It was at his request that I went back to work a month ago after a week's absence. I left the employ of my own accord and at that time Mr. Nichols showed no unusual friendship.

CALLED ON PHONE.

"There has been trouble between Mr. and Mrs. Nichols, but I am not the cause. I can't tell you the real trouble for I don't know it. Last Tuesday about 7 in the morning, Mrs. Nichols called me on the phone. I was at home in Albion.

"She said: 'For God's sake, can you get me a machine right away. I want to get away from this house.' I told her I would rent her my own car, a speedster. I drove to Willey Hills and stopped on Arlington street, a short distance from the Nichols home. Mrs. Nichols, Miss Ferguson and the two Nichols children came through the back door and got in the machine.

"Later I went back to the house to secure personal effects of Mrs. Nichols. The silverware that I saw was her personal property, having been given her as a present at the marriage. Her initials were stamped on the silver.

USED OWN AUTO.

"I want it understood that my own car was used in taking Mrs. Nichols away. We did not use the Nichols machine. As a matter of fact, the Nichols sedan is owned by Mrs. Nichols.

"She asked me to protect her and the children and that is what I tried to do. I would do the same for any other woman who asked me. Any man, with red blood in him, would do likewise.

"As for Miss Ferguson, I am going to marry her in June. We have been engaged for some time and it was this, as much as anything, that made Mrs. Nichols take an interest in us. She is a lady and anyone who says otherwise is a liar."

Foster then told of the camp life at Billerica.

"There were two bed-rooms in the cottage," he said. "One of the rooms was occupied by Mrs. Nichols and Peggy. Miss Ferguson and Barbara slept in the other room. I slept on a cot on the front porch.

"I was not able to sleep much during the past cold nights and I was often forced to walk around to start up the circulation. But I absolutely did not enter that cottage from the time the woman and children went to bed until they arose in the morning. Please make that plain for Mr. Nichols has done his wife a great wrong."

"I shall never forget the look that came over Mrs. Nichols' face when I told her that the two children were gone."

WATCHED STRUGGLE.

Miss Ferguson, the governess, characterized Nichols as "a brute" when referring to the assault on his wife.

"No one but a brute would hit a woman the way he hit her. I was struggling with detectives for possession of little Barbara and I was kept pretty busy. But I was able, at times, to watch the struggle between Mr. and Mrs. Nichols. I was looking right at them when I saw him draw back his fist and crash it into her face. Then she crumpled up and fell. I thought she was dead.

"Yes, I am engaged to Mr. Foster. We expect to be married about June 15. Mrs. Nichols knew we were engaged. I have known Mr. for a long time, that everything was not running smooth at the house. Mrs. Nichols never confided her troubles in me, but I could see that she was unhappy.

"On Monday night I knew that there was more trouble. What caused it I do not know. Early Tuesday morning Mrs. Nichols awakened me and told me to help get the two little girls ready to go away. She told me that I was going along.

"Statements that there was anything wrong between Mrs. Nichols and Mr. Foster are ridiculous."

"STRANGE CONDUCT."

Attorney William C. Noble issued for Nichols, says:

"All I can say is that Mrs. Nichols showed strange conduct for a decent woman in going to such a place with her chauffeur.

"In the defence presented by Nichols in opposition to his wife's request for a warrant he declared that her actions are not condoned by her own mother, who continues to live at the Nichols home and to care for the children.

"Efforts on the part of Nichols to discover the whereabouts of his wife through her attorney, Conrad P.

"MASTERS OF MEN"

by MORGAN ROBERTSON

The greatest story of the sea ever screened!

A thrilling film story of he-men whose veins run hot with red fighting blood!

A blunt, vigorous yarn of a boy's fight upward against overwhelming odds, where fight means a hard fist and prime muscle, high courage and a ready wallop!

Shanghaied! Drugged by crimps and flung insensible into the hell hole forward, where sweating, brawling seamen live like beasts scourged to their tasks with curses and belaying pin.

The sea! The flavor of salt in the morning, the feel of spume in the air, the snapping of wind-swept canvas crackling like a machine gun; the creaking, singing and straining as she rides the high waves! All magic and lure of adventure, the Spanish Main and sailormen!

Love! A timid boy's unspoken dream of his heart's desire; a girl too old-fashioned to offer love unbidden; a lad's sacrifice of youth's dearest possession—honor—to protect her from the shame of another's crime; the confusion of bitter misunderstandings that threaten life-long broken hearts!

Uncle Sam's bluejackets! The fighting men of the greatest nation in the world, and when they think and how they lives their loyalty and cheer and youth, eternal, living, fighting men! The careless devil-may-care "gob," incorrigible, loyal; impudent and loveable!

Romance! The sea spells romance. Red sunsets turn green waves breathing mountains of blood; noon suns spread gold upon the bosom of the sea, cold that beckons and calls to youth to gather its riches; never-ending mirages of golden bowls at rainbows' ends. And, the sea gives up riches; only those who earn them, bitterly squeesed out of its cold, hard business.

Wholesome, clean, healthy! A boy's life of adventure, free from tawdry conflicts and sex illusions, based on fact and real life as he might observed among men, who loved men, who admired men and who wished young America to so live that he might become a man! The trash of silly, social temptations has no place in this screen story of a boy who became the master of the seas!

Here is a story of the making of men; men who acted and argued later. Shifty-eyed men, with a sneer and left punch and a keen eye and a high sense of honor and guts to go the limit!

Dick Halpin is the lad you wanted to be; and I wanted to be! He's the fellow we dreamed of, whose fighting courage we envied. He's the boy that aroused another's prime and ran away to sea to live it down, that the girl he loved might not be shamed and humiliated by the revelation of her brother's weakness. He's the fellow you and I used to talk about; that lad of strength and honor we built with boyish imagination up in the haymow, or while idling with a home-made fishing rod down by the creek. He's your kid and my kid and because we had fathers and mothers to make our way easier we never managed to be him—but we wanted to and we'll live our dreams again with Dick Halpin in this vivid living motion picture, "Masters of Men."

A master of men wrote this great sea tale. A man whose life was as hard as the diamonds he cut and polished never wrote a line until he had lived beyond an average man's age; a man who took a beating at the hands of a brutal second mate with a smile, and who administered a beating with equal cheerfulness; a man who knew the sea and a sailo man's life, who criticized Kipling rightfully and who wrote his first sea tale to prove that a man who knew the sea could write a better story of the sea; a man who earned little by his pen and who starved while he wrote; the greatest writer of sea stories in all literature.

Morgan Robertson, a master of men, wrote the last word in thrilling sea stories when he wrote "Masters of Men."

But did you know that in order to make all the kitchen work easier, all you need do is to lighten it, with the right light?
— in two simple ways:

1. Use a 100-watt or 150-watt Mazda lamp (bulb) in an enclosing glass globe, as a center light, as near the ceiling as possible.
2. Have a light right above the sink, from 6 to 12 inches from the wall, in a deep white-glass shade open at the bottom. An ordinary 50-watt Mazda lamp will supply all the light you need, directly down on the dishes.

LETTERS DISCLOSE LOVE OF SLAIN YOUTH AND GIRL HE SHOT

JEALOUSY AND HATRED IN NOTES

Physicians Fight to Save Life of 17-Year-Old Frances Dwyer

New York, May 14.—While physicians were fighting today to save the life of Miss Frances Dwyer, seventeen, shot by her sweetheart, Arthur Rausch, who then killed himself, relatives found more letters disclosing the depth of their love.

The girl is the daughter of a West Orange, N. J., fire captain. She is in the Orange Memorial Hospital there. The youth is from Union, N. J. In the pockets of their rooms were found packets of love notes. In one he refers to a trysting bell. She forgives "her man" and expressed her hatred of her rival and her revengeful plan for a suitor. She wrote:

"All the wrong you ever done Is forgiven. What you told me Sunday hurt terribly, but I credit you for telling the truth and, after all, if God has forgiven you, who am I or what I should judge?

"OO IDEALISTIC."

"That same manhood will make entirely different person of you. It means so much to me to see you changed. Art, you often told me flew too high.' Even Mr. Beatty told me I was too idealistic.' But, you know I cherish 'my man.' He's everything to me.

"He's chivalrous, upright, brave; has doesn't have to be tall. I love his dark hair and blue eyes. He is opposite in coloring to me. My eyes are dark brown and my hair a trifle lighter, but he must be blond and blue-eyed.

"Art, you can't imagine how I felt when I saw Loretta yesterday. I don't know what kept me from going to her and murdering her. I hate her! To think that she shared your secrets with Margie when I was barred from your heart.

"While I'm talking of all those things nearest my heart, I want to tell you something, too. When we are on the street, no matter where, regardless of when, remember always to carry yourself in a manner above reproach.

FEEL LIKE A QUEEN."

QUICK RELIEF FROM COSTIVENESS

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's oldtime enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No griping in the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth" — bad breath — a tired, "all-in" feeling — coated tongue — sick headache — sluggishness, you'll find quick, sure relief and natural results from one or two of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime. Thousands take them every night just to keep trim. Try them. 15c and 30c.

STRIKE TIES UP BELGIAN CITIES

Brussels, May 14.—The strike of Belgian state employes reached serious proportions today. Work in the larger cities is at a standstill. Food supplies are running short and impeded transportation hinders movement of fresh supplies.

The Government called to the colors all public service workers, putting a military status upon them. A proclamation was issued warning that the strikers who failed to heed the call would face court-martial.

It is generally believed that the strike was organized by Socialists which will be announced from day for political purposes.

PLAN DAILY COAST-TO-COAST AIR MAIL

Chicago, May 14.—A continuous day and night air postal service between New York and San Francisco is expected to become a reality in July or August. It is planned to make the 3,000-mile trip in twenty-eight hours, leaving New York just before noon and reaching Chicago at sundown. The night trip will be blazed by a line of beacon lights and emergency landing fields.

HUNT GRAVE OF COP BELIEVED MURDERED

Cleveland, May 14.—With the finding of the burned pieces of a policeman's uniform, "billy" and revolver holster, indentified as the property of Patrolman Dennis Griffin, missing since early Friday, every available officer was out today hunting for a freshly dug grave. Finding of the articles has destroyed hope that the policeman is alive.

Every road entering Cleveland is being watched for some trace of John L. Whitfield, who kidnaped Griffin while the latter was taking him to jail Friday.

The articles were found near the remains of a bonfire in a road between Geauga Lake and Bainbridge, east of here. Among the articles was a shovel, which a man answering the description of Whitfield borrowed Friday from Mrs. Agnes Brief, who lives about five miles from where the things were found. Police believe the articles were left in the road to steer them away from the location of the body.

Whitfield and a girl companion known as Marie Price, with whom Whitfield left an apartment here Friday afternoon, were reported to have been seen driving along the road near the scene of the discovery Friday night.

He is said to have spent Saturday night with his companion at a farmhouse near Bryan, O.

GIRL WITNESS FLEES POLICE IN LAWSON CASE

Liberally financed by rum runners, a former Back Bay chorus girl, whose name is withheld by the police, is today racing west in New York State, closely followed by New York State police. It is she who told Mrs. John F. Lawson, Jr., that her husband, a missing dry agent, had been murdered by bootleggers.

Mrs. John F. Lawson

"That girl knows something about Jack's disappearance, for it was she who told me he had been slain by bootleggers," Mrs. Lawson said today.

Mrs. Lawson branded as utterly false the stories circulated that Lawson dropped out of sight because of illicit check manipulations. Those stories, she said, were circulated by a former Boston professional man, who is the head of an extensive bootlegging organization, and who is financing the flight of the chorus girl.

"There is no truth to the stories that Jack ran run over the Canadian border all last Summer, any more than there is in the story that he was brought into court when he was twelve years old, or that detectives of a Malden bank had trailed him to New Brunswick," declared Mrs. Lawson.

Mrs. Lawson admitted believing her husband had fallen into the hands of rum runners, who had avenged themselves on him. She declared, however, she would continue her search until it is definitely established what happened to her husband.

'POISON' NOTES LAID TO WOMAN

ers, of which Maxwell is president, said that it would have been impossible for Maxwell to write some of these letters, whose authorship he was accused of, as he was so ill at the time they were mailed that he could not sign checks of the concern.

They declared, too, that Maxwell himself had been the recipient of similar letters.

Several years ago, they said, he had gone to Havana, Cuba, with another man, without having first told his friends his destination. On arrival at their hotel in Havana, Maxwell's friends say, he and his companion were handed "poison pen" letters which had been mailed from New York.

LETTER SENT TO WOMAN.

A short time later, it was said, Maxwell went to Miami, Fla. He met a New York society woman and the two went motoring for several hours. The story goes that on returning to the hotel the woman found one of the accusative letters. Maxwell, returning to his hotel, was said to also have received a letter couched in similar terms.

RUSSIA AVERTS BREAK WITH BRITAIN

London, May 14 (By the Associated Press)—In British official circles the reply of the Russian Soviet Government to the British note is considered as avoiding a rupture. Satisfaction is expressed at what the British consider an about face on the part of Moscow in its attitude toward Great Britain.

Lord Curzon, the Foreign Secretary, will present the Soviet note to the Cabinet this afternoon.

While the British Government is ready to discuss the disputed matters with Leonid Krassin or another credited envoy, Lord Curzon seems determined to maintain all the points raised in the British note and will not tolerate long discursive explanations from Moscow, it was indicated.

The Foreign Secretary will also insist, it was declared, on adequate redress and apologies for the wrongs alleged by the British in their note.

The San Blas reached here Sunday.

HIGH WINDS FORCE PARIS MODISTES TO REVIVE PANTALETTES

FLIMSY CHINTZ GOWNS GIVE LINGERIE NEW IMPORTANCE

By C. F. BERTELLI,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.
Special Wireless to Universal Service.

Paris, May 14.—The prevailing high winds having complicated the dressmakers' introduction of light Summer chintz gowns, the difficulty has been overcome by the revival of lace bordered pantalettes as worn in the early Victorian days.

The extreme flimsiness of the modern creations has given outer lingerie a special importance. A woman going to the races must be sure that what she wears immediately beneath her gown is impeccable and as stylish as the gown itself. As a result the fashionable lingerie makers are reaping a huge harvest.

The "pantalettes" with a lacey fringe, of which a peep is visible between the ankle and the fringe of the skirt, may be white or colored, according to the nature of the gown and the taste of the wearer.

POUCH BENEATH SKIRT.

Many which were confidentially "spotted" at the Longchamps race course were of pale almond green, which is so popular now for hats and tailor mades.

At the same time the increasing worthlessness of paper money, necessitating larger receptacles for the feminine betting enthusiasts, has caused some of the latter to revive grandmother's favorite pouch suspended beneath the skirt. Instead of the old plain white canvas, however, they are of beautifully embroidered beads in Colonial and Russian designs. The wearers claim they are not only more convenient for carrying money, but leave the hands free to hold parasols, which are again popular, or field glasses.

SEN. JOHNSON AT RACES.

The running of the famous French mares trial stakes brought out a distinguished international crowd, including thousands of Americans. Senator Hiram Johnson, accompanied by Mrs. Johnson and Hiram, Jr., did not do any betting, as the Senator asserted that the races looked "even more uncertain than the American Presidential prospects."

Ambassador Alexander R. Moore was hailed as the "luckiest man at the course," winning on every race. Representative Henry Watson said that betting was "against his principles, the same as America entering the League of Nations or the World Court."

Other prominent Americans noted were: Mr. and Mrs. John R. Drexel, Mrs. Herman Oelrichs, Mrs. J. H. Ward and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth B. Ward.

FOES SEEK TO SEVER COURT FROM LEAGUE

Washington, May 14.—Plans of the opponents in the Senate to the Harding-Hughes-Hoover proposal for American membership in the League of Nations Court have begun to take definite shape. Senator Lodge, chairman of the foreign relations committee, and majority floor leader, proposes to sever entirely the connection of the court with the League.

Betty Alden Reports Additions to Boston Colony Southward

By BETTY ALDEN

THAT sport-devoted couple, the Nell Rices (Emma Mandell), are among the most recent to join the Boston colony at White Sulphur Springs.

The Rices are of the year-round colony at Hamilton, where the son of the Charles G. Rices is one of the leading members of the Myopia Hunt Club. His wife is apparently as devoted to the saddle as he, and few indeed are the sporting events along the North Shore in which the Rices do not take part.

IF some of the proud papas and mammas had to satisfy themselves with S. R. O. at the Denishawn dancing recital, it certainly failed to dampen their enthusiasm in the least.

The affair was given at the Tremont Theatre by those two tireless sisters, Berthe and Francesca Braggiotti, who are directors of the Boston branch of the Denishawn Dancing School. The program was made up of pupils of the school, while several numbers were given by the Misses Braggiotti.

Society was much in evidence, for many of the little girls taking part in the recital will be muchfeted debutantes before many moons have passed. And how their beaming daddies did applaud!—though the youthful interpreters of Terpsichore were quite clever enough to win even an unprejudiced person's applause.

The costumes were especially good. The tulips, the violets, the pansies and the dandelions making up the "forest bouquet" actually looked like the posies they were meant to represent. Which was equally true of most of the graceful "fishes" in the last part of the program called "Under the Sea." There were eels and star fish, oysters and jellyfish, seahorses, a pearl, a flying fish and an enticing mermaid, the last-named played by Gloria Braggiotti, younger daughter of the house.

The seahorses, by the way, did a thrill very much like the one in the Vincent Club show. Louise Slocum, Harriet Morse, Elizabeth Cushing, Catherine Channing, Polly Brewster, Polly Winslow and Edith Wolcott were some of the sprightly-stepping quadrupeds of the undersea reglows.

Berthe Braggiotti made a very lustrous "pearl" in her dance of that name, while one of the very best numbers on the program was Francesca Braggiotti in her dance of the "flying fish," in which she wore a goldfishy gleaming costume.

The tango done by Francesca and her brother, Sebastiano Braggiotti, was carried out with no end of dash, and had encores been permitted, they would have had to repeat their dance a good many times, I'm sure.

SUNDAY NIGHT POPS PROVE BIG SUCCESS

By ZOE FABER.

Last night saw the initiation of the forthcoming series of Sunday night Pops in Boston. The enormous gathering and vigorous applause testified to the fact that this series of extra concerts was nothing short of an inspiration on the part of the management. Mr. Jacchia, recovered from a recent illness, conducted for the first time this season Saturday night and last night we a repetition of his success on th occasion.

The program was all Russia with Tchaikovsky holding the fir place in point of numbers and i portance.

The fact that the city fathers fo bid eating, drinking or smoking the Sunday night concerts seeme to have rather less effect on the enjoyment of the audience than migh have been suspected.

RUSSIA FOREIGN MINISTER ASKS ABOUT BOSTON

By Universal Service

Moscow, May 14.—George Tchitcherin, the Soviet Foreign Minister, again appeared at the Imperial Theatre, but not in the dress of an official of the Soviet. He was not wearing the military uniform, but was a common spectator at the Scriabin symphony concert given by the foremost Russian conductor, Emil Cooper.

Disregarding the crisis created by Lord Curzon's attack, Tchitcherin, being an intense music lover, is spending his spare hours at his Steinway piano. At the symphony concert he applauded vigorously.

The audience thought that the situation could not be serious or grave if Tchitcherin could find time for music. He attended the theatre unaccompanied and walked home alone in the middle of the day.

Tchitcherin asked many questions about American literature, with which he shows an amazing acquaintance. He declares himself an admirer of Walt Whitman and asked me if Emerson and Power are much read. He also asked if Boston is still the literary centre of America. He recalled Lee Master's Spoon River anthology, and showed an interest in the Chicago poet, Carl Sandburg.

UNCLE AND HIS NIECE IN LOVE PACT SUICIDE

New York, May 14.—William Brunner, forty-two years old, and his twenty-one-year-old niece, Anne Riedle, were able to endure the world's condemnation of their illicit love for two months. Today their bodies lie cold in a suicide pact in the obscure basement apartment in the Bronx, where they had fled.

A letter signed by the man and girl revealed why he had turned on the gas which asphyxiated her and then shot himself. Brunner had been arrested in Union Hill, N. J., for abandoning his wife of only two years. Miss Riedle came to live with them from Germany a year ago.

Uncle and niece were infatuated on sight. Neighbors talked. He abandoned his wife and served a jail sentence. Last March they vanished.

FLIES PIRATE FLAG.

IN spite of warning from naval authorities and while the United States Attorney and the Mexican government argue it out, Fred Niblo is going to sea with the pirate flag flying, with or without official permission. This was decided after Irving G. Thalberg, vice-president of Louis B. Mayer productions, reviewed the unique situation and concluded that it would be less expensive to sink a ship and jail a cast than to stop production. The strange complication started out as a mild suggestion from a naval officer that the pirate flag should not be displayed on the high seas even for a motion picture. "Captain Applejack" is the pirate. An attempt to get a ruling from the United States Attorney and from the Mexican government caused a delay and a controversy that is becoming serious.

How Linit Brings Out the Dainty Freshness of Your Children's Garments

THERE isn't anything quite so charming as the fresh crispness of your children's dresses, nor anything in which a mother takes more pride.

The trouble is to keep the little dresses looking fresh and dainty. One reason for this is that ordinary starch does not give a smooth surface, nor does it resist the dust and permit the fabric to stay clean.

That is why mothers welcome Linit, the new improved scientific starch.

It remains a fluid for a long period of time. It penetrates every part of the fabric, and helps strengthen it, preventing wear, and increasing the life of the material. Linit was originally developed for the use of the makers of fine fabrics, and is now for the first time available for family use.

For baby's dainty clothes, there is nothing that produces quite such a delightful effect as Linit—or gives such a fresh, spotless appearance.

Go to your grocer and ask for Linit. Begin today and use it for every kind of fabric—whether lawn, cotton, linen, gingham, lace or curtains.

Linit is made by the Corn Products Refining Company—makers of the famous Argo, Duryea and Kingsford's Starches—Karo Syrup and Mazola Salad and Cooking Oil.

If you cannot obtain LINIT at your grocer communicate with CORN PRODUCTS SALES CO., W. A. Cahoon, Mgr., 47 Farnsworth St., Boston, Mass.

STORIES OF BOSTON TOWN

By Jo Swerling

DRUM MAJOR WALTER HENRY THOMAS WAS WITH Sheridan when he took the famous ride to Winchester. The other day, at the age of 73, he enlisted again, for three years. The Drum Major hopes they don't blow taps on him before the next war.

THE OLD MAN SHOWS HIS MEDALS

You can't have everything. Life has been good to Drum Major Walter Henry Thomas, Kipling's Mulvaney come to life in Somerville.

The only regret in Drum Major Thomas' life is that he missed the Battle of Waterloo. He was a bit too young for that, and a bit too old for Chateau Thierry. But in between he has seen his share of fighting.

Today the Drum Major is 73 years old. But he still stands erect. He can march with the best of 'em. His chest is broad, just broad enough to form a background for the largest assortment of medals ever worn by any soldier. He's marking time, is Walter Henry Thomas, for the next war. Until then he must fritter away his time with the trivial duties of armorer at Somerville, where he's Post sergeant of the Massachusetts National Guard.

Yes, sir, for fifty-seven years the Drum Major saw active service in the regular United States Army.

"I see a piece in the paper," says the Drum Major, "where a young marine hereabouts inherits a fortune but decides to stick in the service just the same. A wise kid.

Mars in Blood in His Family

"I busted into the army when I was twelve years old. That's a long time ago—more than sixty years ago. My father was killed in action in the Civil War. One of my ancestors died fighting in the Revolution. I was born under the constellation of Mars. It's in the blood in our family.

"Yes, sir, I was twelve years old when I enlisted as a drummer boy in Company D, 29th Maine Infantry. What war? The Civil, my boy, and anybody that was there will tell you the only thing civil about that war was the name. We had no Big Berthas or howitzers or airplanes or tanks in those days. It was more of a personal war, with man against man.

"I was orderly to General Phil Sheridan when he took that ride to Winchester. I rode with him. Yes, sir. I was at Cedar Creek in '84 when the fightin' was fightin.'

"When we were mustered out in '65, I joined up with the Fifth United States Battery. I was Sergeant Thomas in those days. Then I served with the Maine, New Hampshire and New York State militia. In 1890 I enlisted in the Eighth Massachusetts Infantry, and I was promoted to be drum major.

Went to Cuba With His Regiment

"Where was I when we had the little fuss with Spain? Where do you suppose? I was in Cuba, with my regiment, part of the Army of Occupation. And when I was mustered out after that little ruckus I joined up with the 48th U. S. Volunteers and went to the Philippines. When we had the trouble with Mexico the last time I was there with the Massachusetts Infantry.

"Yes, sir, and when the big show broke, I listed with the rest, and I was just about set to get to France when my wife fell ill. After she died I became a military instructor in Boston, and then I joined up with the 15th Regiment of the Guard.

"Yes, sir, I never did forgive myself for missing the doings in France, but hell—there'll be another war some day. And I'm not taking any chances of missing it, either.

"That's why I've just enlisted again. This time it's with the Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, for a term of three years.

"What do think of the chances for another war pretty soon?

"My medals? Shucks. Every good soldier gets 'em."

"TRIAL WIFE" CLINGS TO PRESENTS

Dr. Ross Balks on "Run Down Church"

INSISTS HE HAVE FULL CHARGE

Pastor Demands Removal From Ruggles Street Be Carefully Considered

The Rev. J. J. Ross, D.D., pastor of the Ruggles Street Baptist Church, who resigned yesterday, will withdraw his resignation if certain conditions are complied with, he said today.

Dr. Ross declared he would be glad to remain, provided a satisfactory understanding could be reached with the Boston Baptist Social Union, which administers bequests of the Ford Foundation.

He also corrected the impression that his resignation was due to sympathy to the colored people in the neighborhood in which the church is located.

The congregation has moved to refuse Dr. Ross' resignation and to request that a meeting of the Baptist Social Union and the officers of the church be called.

WANTS TO STAY.

"I have no desire to leave the Ruggles Street Baptist Church," said Dr. Ross. "In fact, I want to stay here, but as conditions are at present I find it impossible. If these conditions are remedied, I will remain gladly.

"My reasons for resigning are threefold, namely, the location of the church, the condition of the buildings, and the relations between the church and the Boston Baptist Social Union.

"When I decided to accept a call from the church, I was informed that money for improvements was on hand and that if desired the work would be undertaken and finished before I arrived on the field. That was three months ago, and although the church buildings are in a run-down and deplorable condition, no repairs have even been started.

FOR WHITE FAMILIES.

"Mr. Ford in his will, requested that a careful survey be made of this community at least twice a year, and that reports upon such surveys be presented and recorded. He wanted the church to minister to white working men and their families.

"Finding that no such survey had been made for years, I started one myself, which revealed that in this immediate vicinity, out of a population of about 20,000 people, 18,000 are of the African race. There are a number of good colored churches in the community which are more capable of ministering to the negro race in a more effective manner than a white church could do.

"Of course with such a large colored population, which is constantly increasing, it is evident that the white families for whom the church was provided, have been moving elsewhere.

SOCIAL UNION TRUSTEES

"In the will of Mr. Ford the request is made that the Ruggles Street Church, through the cordial and appreciative interest of the Massachusetts Baptist Convention, be conveyed to the Boston Baptist Social Union, who are trustees of the fund.

"Thus, we are a congregation of God's people without a home of our own, rendered dependent and deprived of the power of self-determination and initiative to pursue our own plans and policies.

"Doubtless Mr. Ford did not foresee that a time might come when the church would not have in its fellowship several men who were members of the Baptist Social Union.

"There is a possible remedy in the hands of the Union. They can decide that it is now 'practicable' to move to a suitable location, as suggested by Mr. Ford.

NEEDS FULL AUTHORITY.

"I considered and accepted the call to this church with the understanding that I, in co-operation with the executive committee, and with the approval of the church, would have complete authority.

"It is impossible to conceive that a committee outside the church could successfully direct the work done within and by the church.

"Having no positive assurance that the location, conditions and relations of our church would be changed in the near future, I regretfully presented my resignation. If these conditions and relations are changed, I shall be only too glad to remain."

WOMAN FINDS LOST GEMS IN BOYS' HANDS

Lawrence, May 14.—Police today were investigating the mysterious disappearance and recovery of $1,350 worth of jewelry in the North Station of the Boston & Maine railroad here.

Mrs. Agnes Peterson of No. 508 Salem street, North Andover, telephoned Captain Michael Barry that while waiting in the station she went to get her child a drink of water.

A handbag, containing a bead purse with $6 in cash, clothing and the jewelry, was left on a seat. When she returned Mrs. Peterson said the bag was gone. She described the jewelry as consisting of one diamond bracelet, valued at $350, one diamond ring, $450; one pendant, $25, and one ruby ring, $25.

Captain Barry detailed several officers to search for a youth who Mrs. Peterson said had been sitting near her, but was gone when she returned.

While the police were combing the city, Mrs. Peterson again telephoned to report that she had recovered her jewelry and the clothing. The bead purse, containing the $6 in cash, and the bag itself, were still missing.

The woman said she found two small boys struggling for possession of the clothing and took it away from them. The police are still wondering.

DENOUNCES SHIPPING MONOPOLY

Boston Joins Other Cities in Protest Against Great Lakes Conditions

Washington, May 14.—The Shipping Board was charged with lending aid to the creation of monopoly by "one group of citizens to gouge another group" in a brief filed today with the Interstate Commerce Commission by Northwestern and New England shippers using Great Lakes transportation lines.

Under provisions of the merchant marine act, shipowners having vessels under United States registry on the Great Lakes have been arguing for the elimination of the Northern Navigation Company and other Canadian lines from participation in traffic between points in the United States and the Shipping Board at Commerce Comission hearings supported their contentions.

The New England Traffic League and Chambers of Commerce in Boston, Duluth, St. Paul and Minneapolis declared in the belief that the Shipping Board had appeared "in a capacity that to us is most surprising."

"We agree," said the brief, "that we should offer and extend all reasonable protection to ships of American registry, but when that protection reaches the point that it allows the operators of American ships to monopolize the trade of the Great Lakes, and as a consequence of that monopoly require and force the American public to pay higher rates and to endure just such character of service as they care to extend, then we say it is high time that a little competition should be injected regardless of where that competition comes from."

American shippers East and West are absolutely a unit, the brief concluded, in demanding support for the established rights of Canadian lines to participate in Great Lakes traffic.

DEPUTY POLICE HEAD OPERATED UPON

Deputy Superintendent Thomas C. Evans of the police department is convalescing from an operation which he underwent at City Hospital Saturday. Latest reports say that he is resting as comfortably as could be expected under the circumstances. The deputy has been ill for several weeks at his home, No. 4 Dorchester. He was at his desk at police headquarters Friday to clean up several matters and then went to the hospital.

OVERCOME BY GAS IN LYNN TRENCH

While working in a trench on Union street, Lynn, today, Patrick Nagle, twenty-five years old, of No. 4 Rockmere terrace, Lynn, was overcome by escaping illuminating gas. Nagle, who is employed by the Lynn Gas & Electric Company, was removed to the Lynn Hospital, where he was said to be in a critical condition. His heart is said to be weak. Other laborers in the trench were not affected.

JAIL FOR FATHER WHO BEAT SON WITH STRAP

Breaking away from his father, who was administering a beating to him with a strap, fifteen-year-old Philip Young, a mulatto, son of Robert C. Young of No. 129 Hicks street, West Newton, today, slid down a waterspout and ran to the Newton police station.

The boy's back, shoulders and face were cut and bruised showing signs of the punishment he had undergone.

He said he had received at least thirty-five welts of the strap. Dr. Fred M. Lowe, city physician of Newton, declared it was the worst beating he had ever seen administered to a juvenile.

The boy's white mother in court said the boy had received the injuries during a boxing contnest last week.

Judge Bacon found Young guilty and sentenced him to three months. Young appealed and was held in $500.

ARREST "KID" WEDGE IN RAID OF I. W. W.

Los Angeles, May 14.—The Rev. F. E. Wedge, prize fighter, lumberjack, clergyman and former Harvard student, is again in the limelight, having been arrested with twenty-six others supposed to be holders of I. W. W. cards on charges of violating the criminal syndicalism law.

Rev. F. E. Wedge

The prisoners were taken in a raid on the Los Angeles harbor front by police who were seeking to put down disorder arising from the strike of members of the Marine Transport Workers.

DEFENDANT IN ODD LOVE SUIT FOUND

Mrs. Flora S. Lowe, Ex-Model, Declines to Discuss Life With Married Man

Ever since the unusual suit filed against her by James M. Fisk of No. 116 Brighton avenue, Allston, was made public, Mrs. Flora S. Lowe has been in seclusion.

The Boston American today found Mrs. Lowe living with friends at No. 88 White street, East Boston.

Fisk's suit against her is one of the most remarkable on record in Massachusetts courts. Stripped of its legal language, his allegations are that:

PUT $5,000 IN TRUST.

He entered into an arrangement with Mrs. Lowe to live illegally with her as man and wife. In consideration of this agreement, he caused to be placed in trust for her in March, 1921, the sum of $5,000. He also furnished an apartment for her and bought an automobile for her use.

Upon the termination of their relations, he demanded the money, furniture and automobile.

She refused to return them.

DENIES ALLEGATIONS.

In her answer, filed May 7, after Judge Waitt in Superior Court had tied up the $5,000 by an injunction until the case is decided, Mrs. Lowe, who twenty years ago was a well known artist's model, denied all the allegations of Fisk.

She asserted that Fisk gave her the auto as a gift for the purpose of transporting her from Chicago to Boston so that she could live with him here. She says the $5,000 and the furniture is her property, acquired from her earnings and from the sale of certain property owned by her.

Mrs. Lowe refuses to discuss the details of her life with Fisk. The latter, who is married, likewise declines to discuss the affair. The case is due to come to trial soon.

WOMEN TO HUNT SOMERVILLE RUM MEN

Disgusted with the alleged desultory manner in which Somerville police officials have gone about prohibition enforcement, a committee of five women has been appointed by the Federated Women's Church Societies of Somerville to urge prohibition enforcement, and a committee of 100 men and women is being organized for vigilance work, Mrs. E. Talmadge Root, president of the federation, announced before a public meeting in the Somerville High School.

Mrs. Root

Soon after the "committee of five" was appointed, Mrs. Root said, she was called to the telephone by a man who offered, for a monetary consideration, to give her six addresses within a quarter of a mile of Union Square, Somerville, where liquor is being manufactured and sold. The committee was unable to take advantage of the offer because of lack of funds.

BIG YEAR FOR S. P. RAILWAY

New York, May 14.—The revenue from railway operations in 1922, aggregating $68,854,723, exceeded that of any year since the record year 1917, but was $4,514,554 less than in that year, it is disclosed by the thirty-ninth annual report of the Southern Pacific Company, made public today.

Net railway operating income for 1922 totalled $46,227,846, an increase of more than $10,000,000 over 1921, and not income from the railroad property and proprietary companies, combined, totaled $32,609,150, as compared with $30,618,777 the previous year.

The direct cost of the shopmen's strike is estimated by Julius Kruttschnitt, chairman of the executive committee, as $3,500,000.

"Competition for transcontinental traffic by the steamship lines operating through the Panama Canal," he said in a statement to stockholders, "has been intensified by a rate war between the steamship lines, and the volume of tonnage shipped through the canal was nearly 100 per cent. greater in 1922 than during the preceding year."

WOMAN SOUGHT IN MURDER OF BABY

Lawrence, May 14.—Arrests may be made today in connection with the finding of the body of a murdered infant child under a seat in a Lawrence theatre Saturday. The police are investigating a young woman who attended the performance shortly before the mutilated body was found. The body was wrapped in a Boston newspaper. The rope which strangled the infant was still tied about the neck and the skin was badly burned, indicating that an effort had been made to burn the body.

George Parent

The body was found by two boys, George Parent, nineteen years old, of No. 231 Lowell street, and John Santaniello, nine years old, of No. 284 Chestnut street.

WETHERN EMPLOYES IN "FAVOR DANSANT"

Harris, Michael Clougherty, Arthur Chambers and Goldie Whiteman. Mabel Gillen, Clara Colter, Mae Murphy, Mary Connors, Margaret Lawless, Laura Mackie and Catherine Daly. BROKER AND BANK ROLL MISSING

E. Milton Aaron, a broker, sent an affectionate letter and a telegram to his wife in Englewood, N. J., from the Parker House on Friday afternoon and then vanished.

Today his wife is in Boston frantically urging the police to extend a search of Greater Boston, which has thus far failed to uncover the faintest clew to his mysterious disappearance.

Aaron wrote that he had successfully completed a business deal with a man named Joyce on Friday morning. He carried a money bag containing $1,500 on leaving home on Tuesday last. In his pockets was another large sum of money in bills. He wore a valuable diamond ring and had a solid gold watch and chain.

His telegram announced that he would return home that night after attending to a personal affair in Chelsea. He left the hotel at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. His baggage still remains in his room, the bed of which was undisturbed. The hotel employes have no recollection of seeing him after that hour and apparently he never reached Chelsea.

As They Do in Utopia

By Les Conklin.

"GOOD MORNING, Mr. De Posh," smiled Mrs. Julep, as she entered the office of the Three Cushion Bank. "I wondered if you could give my son Polonius a position in your bank."

"Has he had any experience in the banking business?" inquired Mr. De Posh.

"Oh, yes, he has been clipping Liberty Bond coupons for three years now," said Mrs. Julep. "And I know that he reads the financial pages of the newspapers regularly because he plays the stock market quite heavily."

"He might be a good man to have around," reflected the president. "I've been so busy planting my wife's garden lately that I haven't had time to read the financial page myself. Does you son speak English?"

"No, just plain American," replied Mrs. Julep. "He had to leave school when he was twelve years old to help me support his father, but I buy all the latest magazines for him. In fact, he likes to speak so well that he talks in his sleep."

"That's fine," said the president, "I'll hire him as my confidential secretary. Tell him to put on a clean shirt and send him around the first thing in the morning."

"Mr. Millionberries," said young Patrick Ginsberg, "your daughter and I would like to get engaged and we wanted to know what you thought about it."

"Good heavens, another one!" exclaimed the great mushroom magnate. "I thought that she was engaged to the Russian, Count Off."

"Well, she was," admitted Pat, "but she broke the engagement because the Count plays such a rotten hand of bridge."

"Have you any prospects?" inquired the magnate.

"I haven't any money in the bank," said Pat, "but I've got a life insurance policy, a second-hand flivver and the best garage in town."

"I'm glad you are a mechanic," said Mr. Millionberries. "If you will promise to repair my automobiles free of charge you can get married right away."

"Good day, Mr. Squeezepenny," said Susie the stenographer to the head of the U. S. Bootlegging Syndicate, "it's closing time and I'm going home now."

"But, Susie," protested the boss, "we've got to get those letters off to the branch office in Cuba in order to get some more Scotch up here in time for the Bankers' Reunion Banquet next month."

"I can't help that," said Susie. "My boy friend is going to propose tonight and I don't want to miss it after waiting for seven years."

"I don't blame you," sympathized Mr. Squeezepenny, "but we've got to finish these letters someiow. Suppose you bring your portable typewriter out to my country place tomorrow. My wife is throwing a big party and I'll paddle you around the lake in one of the gondolas while you type the letters."

A RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

NOW gentle Spring is in the air, her favored stunts performing; the flowers are blooming everywhere, the birds and bees are swarming. Dame Nature wears a beaming guise, men flock to season bucolic to count the spots on butterflies and watch the lambkins frolic. It is a gay and carefree time, so fraught with happy memories that it really seems to me a crime Wife picks it for the cleaning. Oh, why not take some dismal week along in February when no one save a human fiend could thing of being merry? Then, when the wicked tempest roars and sets the blood congealing, why not rip rugs from off the floors and mop the walls and ceiling? Such times seem fit to do your worst and seize things topsy-turvy; but do mine after April first should be so grossly nervy. But still my bright suggestion fails, Wife hears of it with scorning, and marches in with brooms and pails some gorgeous Maytime morning. Some day when all the world's aglow and sweet with passing showers, she says: "We'll clean the bungalow, James, beat the rugs six hours!" She puts the skids on beauty then, though bright the sun is beaming, good-bye to hopes of fishermen, for brief vacations scheming! The smell of soap is in the air, the meals are few and scanty; I long to eat away somewhere and moan into a shanty. Yes, to some tumble-down retreat I'd haste with all my power, if there I'd find no rugs to beat, no window-panes to scour. Now gentle Spring is in the air, how fine would be this season if ruthless housewives here and there would only hark to reason!

The difference between legal language and that used by the man in the street is illustrated in this way:

If a man were to give another an apple, he would simply say: "Have an apple?"

But if the transaction were done in legal form the lawyer would draw up a deed of gift in the following form:

"I hereby give and convey to you, all and singular, my estate and interests, right, title, claim, and advantages of and in said apple, together with all its skin, juice, meat, and pips, and all rights and advantages therein, with full power to bite, munch, eat, and otherwise to eat the same away with or without the skin, juice, meat, and pips, anything hereinbefore or hereinafter or in any other means of whatever nature or kind whatsoever to the contrary in any wise notwithstanding."

And then another lawyer would come along and take it away!

A car approached and Pat held out his hand for it to stop.

"Howld on there," he said. "Have you a driving license?"

"Of course, I've got a license," said the driver, putting his hand into his pocket. "Do you want to see it?"

"An' phwat would I want to see it for if ye've got it wid ye?" replied Pat. "Sure, Oi only want to see it when ye haven't it."

Remember the Time

By Jack Casey

PEOPLE would say "Ta-ta, over the river." An' how the many would yell if they happened to meet yer on a Sunday afternoon out for a walk in the country with yer best girl. An' her name was Edith an' she was blonde an' pretty an' yer loved her desperately until about Christmas time, when yer didn't dare to cease for fear o' bein' misunderstood in respect to what was expected of a swain at such a time so yer bought her a lovely $9.00 amethyst but pin gettin' in exchange a thirty-nine cent necktie marked up to fifty during the Christmas sales days.

If somebody met yer Pa or Ma an' did some braggin' about somethin' when Ma or Pa come home an' told about it they'd always say "They laid it on thick." Yer always got a Spring suit at Easter an' felt uncomfortable when yer Ma called to have yer exposed so's yer could go into town with her an' have it fitted. An' yer'd tell her all the way in to go to a store where yer'd be sure to get a baseball an' bat with the suit.

Pupils always snickered an' everybody looked at a pupil if his or her Ma came in to have him excused. There was always excitement if a policeman came into the school an' the girls would all look at the boys who were full of the most deviltment.

If a guy cheated in a game yer'd always yell, "That's no fair." Yer saw a candy pullin' machine for the first time at an amusement park an' thought it was wonderful. Fellers in college collected girls' hat pins an' it got all the style for girls to have hat pins made out of uniform buttons. Somebody invented glass topped hatpins with photos in 'em an' a feller smokin' would say, "Put yer hand on my stomach an' look in my eye" an' yer would an' he'd touch yer hand with the lighted part of his cigar an' think it was funny.

Medbury Says---

By John P. Medbury

COLLEGE professors, historians and students of international languages have been trying for years to discover what the words are on the card that the optician sees when he fits your glasses.

THERE are a couple of hundred letters on each card, but none of them seem to spell anything.

BUT even if you could spell the words, you'd have a hard job pronouncing them.

OF course some people buy glasses when they don't need them. They go there to have the optician teach them the alphabet.

EVEN if a man has an education he often wears glasses just to give his nose something to do.

ONE bird referred to his nose as "the bridge of size."

THEN he bought a pair of long-vision glasses so that he could see the end of it.

HE finally had to buy two pairs. He wore one to look for the others.

ANOTHER guy bought several pairs of smoked spectacles for his son. He said the kid was going to school soon and would probably get a lot of black eyes.

HE wouldn't take white glasses because they didn't give his boy any privacy.

BUT one kid was so proud of his black eye that he painted it with radium so the boys in the neighborhood could see it in the dark.

A PESSIMISTIC guy bought a pair of glasses just so he could see his wife's sister. He said he never could see her since the day he met her.

HE purchased a pair of long distance lenses, so that every time he looks at her she seems further away from him.

OF course, glasses are hard to keep clean, but this can be overcome by just wearing the rims.

RIMS with no glasses in them are better anyway, because if you drop them they won't break.

STILL, if your sight is poor and you don't wear glasses, you won't be able to see where you're going; but you can remedy that by not going anywhere.

SPECTACLES are wonderful things, but a check from home is better for the eyes than all the glasses in the world.

BELGIUM DECLARES WILSON CANCELLED HER WAR DEBT TO U. S.

REFUSES TO CONSIDER SETTLING

Roumania and France Flatly Decline to Talk About Discharging Obligations

By WINDER R. HARRIS, Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, May 14—Discussion of the Franco-Belgian suggestion, in connection with the reparations dispute, for cancellation of their debts to the United States, disclosed here that Belgium has refused from the outset even to consider a settlement, on the claim that the agreement made with former President Wilson at Paris released her from payment.

France likewise has not budged from her attitude of last year, when M. Parmentier came to Washington and informed the World War Debt Funding Commission that the French government would not enter into a funding arrangement on any terms at the time and would not set a date when she would be willing to talk settlement.

ROUMANIA BALKS.

Roumania is a third one of the debtor governments it is now learned, that has announced to the American commission its intention to ignore indefinitely its war debt.

The agreement with former President Wilson which Belgium now is relying upon as her approval of fair formulated outside the Versailles, with France and Great Britain also participating. President Wilson transmitted it to Congress for ratification on February 22, 1921, just before his retirement from the White House.

HAD NO AUTHORITY.

The matter was referred respectively to the Senate finance and House ways and means committees without discussion and has slept there since. President Harding did not renew the recommendation of his predecessor that the proposition be approved by Congress.

The total of the Belgian indebtedness is $350,000,000 in round numbers.

VISITS PRELATE IN RUSSIAN PRISON

Moscow, May 14 (By Associated Press)—The Rev. Edmund Walsh, head of the Papal Russian Relief Mission, was permitted to visit Archbishop Zepniak in prison yesterday.

The Archbishop said he was living well treated, although fasting in Lenten.

Archbishop Zepniak is not in solitary confinement, Mr. Walsh said, but is kept in a small cell with another priest named Budnitsky, who is awaiting trial. Previously the Archbishop had been allowed only a half hour of exercise each day, but Father Walsh was able to have this extended to an hour. He was also permitted to receive the Epiphanion from home, tinned meat products, all of which were closely inspected by the authorities.

CANAL VICTIM'S BODY MISSING FROM AUTO

MRS. A. WRIGHT TOWNES, RESCUED

DR. W. E. WRIGHT, DROWNED

Boston, May 14—Divers, aided by boat crews of the Cape Cod Canal Company, a life-saving crew from Sandwich and many volunteers recovered the wrecked automobile of Dr. William E. Wright, Harvard pathological technician, from the Cape Cod Canal, but failed to find the body of Mr. Wright.

Thousands of persons lined the banks of the canal to watch the search for the car and the body. Officials of the company believe the body was washed down stream after the car was submerged.

THE POPPY PERIL

By LAUCHLIN JAMES

An Eye-Opener Romance in Which Is Depicted the Horror of What Drugs Do to Hollywood

BEGIN THIS STORY NOW

Two days after Kerry Rowan, a noted motion picture director, had visited the offices of the District Attorney in Los Angeles Rowan is found shot to death in his home, with a bowl of poppies scattered on the floor beside him. Rowan has given much information whereby the drug evil in Hollywood might be attacked and had promised to risk death by testifying against those caught in raids, for the sake of a clean Hollywood and because of his sincere affection for a young film star. Before this he has visited China and India where he has seen the effect of drugs on men and women both in high and low life. He becomes a movie director at Hollywood, then, and strikes the trail of the poppy again.

Trying to Save Sylvia

SIGMUND BERY provided Vaughn with a typewriter and the new secretary spent the rest of the day arranging his room, a process which filled Tin Moy with the deepest scorn.

"There is too much silk in this man," he informed his employer that evening. "He has made his room look like a yip-yap girl's."

"Much to his taste," said Rowan. "Where is the harm?"

Tin Moy was not inclined to dismiss the matter so lightly. "That kind of a man is like a cat," he asserted. "Rub it the wrong way and out come the claws."

"Very well; you keep an eye on him," directed his master. "I have other troubles to battle with."

In this Rowan spoke truly. Sylvia Staley's condition was steadily becoming worse. A little nurse and it would become impossible to conceal from outsiders the fact that something was wrong.

With every power at his command he was pushing to a conclusion the final scenes of the picture in which she was engaged. In his haste he worked every one such long hours that Matt Crane was moved to protest.

"Aren't you crowding Sylvia pretty hard these days?" he asked Rowan. "She's been looking awfully tired and nervous lately, seems to me."

"That's exactly why I'm rushing things," Rowan enlightened him. "I'm afraid she's on the road to a nervous breakdown. The quicker this picture is finished the better, and then I think we'll send her away for a long rest. I think a trip East would do her good, and by arranging a few personal appearances for her I can fix it so it won't cost her a cent."

This evidence of Rowan's consideration served to quiet Crane for the time being, but in reality the director's plans for his star were of quite a different nature from those he pretended to have in mind. At his first opportunity he consulted a Dr. Kenny, whom he believed to be the best physician in Los Angeles along certain lines.

Hyoscyamine

"Doctor, I want to know what you consider the quickest and best method for curing a person of the drug habit," he stated. "I mean under conditions where you have complete control of the patient and are not obliged to resort to a lingering, tapering-off process."

"That depends upon the drug which is being used and upon the condition of the user," replied the physician, cautiously. "Can you give me a little more information?"

Rowan gave it to him. "I see," nodded the doctor. "In that case I think the hyoscyamine treatment might prove particularly effective."

"Hyo—What?"

"Hyoscyamine," repeated Dr. Kenny. "It's a drug analagous to hasheesh dreams, but he suffers no harm under the influence of it while the other drug to which he is addicted is being withdrawn. It keeps him in a stupor and he has the usual hasheesh dreams but he suffers no pain and the visions are pleasing rather than horrible. Glandular action is gradually re-established under it and when it, in turn, is withdrawn, the worst stage of the victim's craving has been passed. Diet, fresh air and exercise will do the rest. I've found it highly successful."

"Have you any nurses who can administer the treatment properly?"

"Surely; once I have started it."

"Then here's what I want you to do," and Rowan proceeded to take Dr. Kenny into his confidence and outline for him the plan he had in mind.

In pursuance of the plan as it was finally perfected, Rowan's first step was to see that Matthew Crane was sent up to Santa Barbara on the day that Sylvia's picture was to be finished, his instructions being to procure some photographs and drawings of the old Spanish mission there for use in designing the settings for a forthcoming picture.

A Stab at Dope

As his next step Rowan suggested to Sylvia that they take a run in his motor car that afternoon; the moment she could get washed up after the last scene had been shot.

"Just by way of a celebration," he urged. "We'll have dinner somewhere along the way and come home early. Matt's out of town and I haven't had you to myself for a long time."

Sylvia consented and dusk found the two driving along a winding road that led back into the hills. "Where are we going?" asked the fair passenger presently.

"That's a little surprise I've prepared for you," said Rowan, grimly.

"A friend of mine, a doctor, has a ripping little bungalow away off from everything. We are invited there to dinner. It's quiet and restful and I know we'll enjoy ourselves."

The bungalow was reached in due course, and Dr. Kenny was on the porch to meet them. To Sylvia's amazement the next person she encountered was her own maid, awaiting her inside the door with a smile which could not quite conceal her anxiety. Rowan promptly took the bull by the horns.

"You're going to stay here a while, Sylvia," he informed her gently. "You need rest very badly and—and treatment. All your things are here. You'll have every comfort. But," he paused and held her eyes for a moment with his, "you will not be allowed to leave until you are completely rid of all desire for that stuff you've been taking. You can make up your mind to that right now."

A tempestuous scene followed; a scene acutely painful to all concerned, but in the end, with the aid of the trained nurse, who had been keeping in the background, Sylvia was got into bed and the treatment was commenced.

Two days later at the studio Rowan was confronted by Matt Crane.

"I want to know what's become of Sylvia," he demanded in a tone which made a number of bystanders look up quickly and pause to listen.

It was no part of Rowan's plan that Matt should know anything about the real nature of Sylvia's trouble. He felt that the knowledge might kill the young man's love for her and by now the director had reached a point where, if he could get rid of the girl's heart for himself, he wanted to see it given to one who would bring her the most happiness.

"She must be somewhere between here and Atlantic City, I suppose," he replied calmly. "Isn't that where she was going?"

An Open Threat.

"She never said anything to me about it. She never even left any word for me."

"I imagine it was decided in a hurry. She was a pretty tired, sick girl that last day, Matt."

Crane looked at him steadily in a manner which showed that his suspicions were far from being allayed. "Did you see her the day she left?" he persisted.

"Yes, I saw her off."

"Funny nobody else saw her."

"Hardly any one knew she was going."

"Well, I'm willing to wait a day or two," concluded Matt, sullenly, "but by God, if I don't hear from her then, you'll hear from me; understand?"

The number of people recalled later that those were his very words.

In view of the anxiety Sylvia was causing him and the amount of time and money he was expending in an effort to save the girl from herself, it was difficult for Rowan to keep from asking Matt by what right he felt entitled to assume such a belligerent attitude in the matter.

It was only by recalling that he would have felt the same way had their positions been reversed that he was able to reply quietly, "All right, Matt. I'm sure you'll hear from her soon, but I wouldn't be too impatient about it. She needed a complete rest and she needed it immediately. Steps were taken to see that she got it, that's all. It wouldn't surprise me if nobody heard from her for a while."

"Who's with her?" demanded the young man, still not quite reassured.

"Her maid is with her," answered Rowan, truthfully enough.

"What hotel are they going to in Atlantic City?"

"I don't know. Those arrangements are always looked after by the New York office."

"Yours for Purity"

"How long will she be gone?"

"Until she feels strong enough to work again, I suppose. That's what you'd want her to do, isn't it?"

Considerably mollified, but still resentful because Sylvia had been sent away during his absence, Matt went his way. Rowan gave vent to a sigh of temporary relief, but his worries were by no means at an end. There was still his battle with the drug pedlars to be inaugurated. He called up Ada Dowell.

"Have you found out anything about the matter we were discussing a while ago?" he asked her.

"Well, I should hope I had," was the encouraging reply. "Come around tonight and I'll tell you about it."

"Right," said Rowan. "I knew I could count on you."

"Sure. Yours for purity, Ada Dowell," laughed the actress. "I'll look for you around 8."

The dainty little human anachronism was as good as her word.

"First thing I know, people will be putting me down for a 'happy dester' myself," she told Rowan that evening. "I've asked questions until you'd think my supply of hop was running low and I was frantic to get hold of some more of it. But I found out a few things, just the same."

"Who is it—Chandler and her gentleman friend?"

"Yes, and that South American and his girl who did the tango in Royal Sackett's last picture—they say Royal's got the habit now, by the way—and a stoop-shouldered, scar-faced Chinaman who collects laundry at some of the cheap boarding houses and two or three others. Here's a list of the names, and an address or two. Burn it up when you've copied it, won't you? I don't want to appear in this, Kerry."

"You won't," he promised her, "and I can't thank you enough, Ada. You're a credit to your sex as well as being the marvel of the screen."

Rowan lost no time in putting his data on the dope traffic into shape. Adelbert Vaughn, coming in late that night, found his employer sitting up laboriously operating a small typewriter.

Costly Carelessness

"Can't I do that for you, Mr. Rowan?" he inquired.

"Thanks, no, answered Rowan, reaching quickly for a blotter and laying it over the sheet of paper which protruded from the machine. "This is even too private for a private secretary." He smiled to take the edge off his refusal and after a moment's chat, his secretary said good-night. Having finished his report, Rowan locked it up in the living room desk where he had been working.

IMPROVING MEMORY

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

"I think an article on mnemonics and memory development would be of interest to many. Are 'memory courses' of any practical use, in your opinion? Also, would you suggest such one desirous of improving his memory? Also, would you explain memory scientifically?—E. M., a reader of your most absorbing articles, Cambridge, Mass."

SUPPOSE we look at the scientific side first. It is a happy condition of people's minds in our day that such a proposal no longer repels, but on the contrary generally attracts.

It is the business of both psychology and physiology, working together, to account for memory. Physiology reports that "memory is a stopping of nervous disturbances that come in from the sense, and hording them so that they may, in turn, set up, at some future time, a nervous disturbance that shall produce activity." So Dr. E. G. Martin states the case, and gives this example: "If a fox, after taking the fowl which he is carrying home, comes back in search of one that he saw roosting"—that is a case of a nervous disturbance arrested in the brain and nerving, in turn, to set up a nervous disturbance which results in the act of going back to find the fowl seen in passing. It is the fox's memory that dooms the second rooster.

Physiologists speak of "arrival platforms" in the brain, where nervous disturbances are stopped to be retained until they set up action by reproducing the disturbance. Thus memory is a registration in the brain cells. But it is a permanent registry, and may be used over and over to produce action, and the oftener it is used the more deeply it becomes impressed.

This brings us to the psychological side of the subject.

"Association underlies all memory," says Dr. R. C. Givler. "Nothing is remembered alone—it always requires associations previously formed about the forgotten fact."

The organization of the memory contents of your mind should begin with the first introduction of a new subject. Put it at once in the company where it belongs, and then you will not only know where to find it, but it will step forth of itself when you turn toward the file where it stands.

Arrange your memories as you arrange the books in your library—putting the poets' volumes on certain shelves, and the histories by themselves, and the travellers' tales all together, and the works on different sciences in groups.

Putting a new fact in its proper relations to things already learned as soon as it becomes known to you helps greatly to insure its retention and to make it always ready for recall. If you pitch it into your head without regard to where it falls among the crowd of other things already there, it may become like a needle in a haystack. You have forgotten it in the very moment of acquiring it. Fortunately, in any healthy brain there seem to be roadways or channels that open of themselves for the reception of new acquisitions, sending them automatically to their proper lodgings among the cells, where their related predecessors are assembled. Or we may say that the grouped memories already acquired exert a particular attraction upon any cognate subjects that appear on the threshold of attention and draw them to their proper associative centres. The object of any system of memory cultivation should be to strengthen this tendency.

Keeps Children's Hair Beautiful

Proper shampooing is what makes children's hair beautiful. It brings out all the real life and lustre, the natural wave and color, and makes it soft, fresh and luxuriant.

Children's hair simply needs frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, but fine young hair and tender scalps cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soap. The free alkali, in ordinary soap, soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it. This is why millions of discriminating mothers, everywhere, use Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo.

This clear, pure, and entirely greaseless product cannot possibly injure, and does not dry the scalp or make the hair brittle, no matter how often you use it.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and has the appearance of being much thicker and heavier than it really is. It leaves the scalp soft and the hair fine and silky, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo at any drug store. It is inexpensive and a four ounce bottle lasts for months.

THE WAYS OF A HUSBAND—By ANN LISLE

Continuing the Interesting and Intensely Human Adventures of Anne and Jim

HOW THE STORY STARTS

Jim and Anne find happiness again on a honeymoon spent in the apartment of Betty Winston, loaned for the occasion. They go to Dreamwold for a Sunday dinner with Jeanie and are met in the grounds by Rosa, who ignores Anne. Rosa advises the discharge of Mabel Storrs to save the big salary. This Anne resents. Evvy helps Anne arrange her apartments and a dinner is given as a housewarming.

By Ann Lisle

I FELT choked. I couldn't decide if this were Jim's revenge for my arranging to lunch with Tony or an excuse to flaunt his friendship for Rosa Cordova.

"But Jim—you can't entertain for Rose in that way," I protested. "Not if you're planning to establish her socially. It would do her more harm than good if you did that. People will talk. You can't do that——"

"Can't I?" asked Jim lazily. "Suppose we cut out this discussion. I'm so blamed tired that I think the best thing for me to do will be try to find relaxation in reading."

In spite of Jim's disapproval, I felt that there was no alternative but to keep my luncheon appointment with Anthony Norvys. He was waiting for me when I arrived. The warm, sweet friendliness of his greeting made me realize anew that no friend of Tony's would ever willingly fail him. And when he laid his hand over mine, the tangible reminder that a wooden mechanism took the place of the hand he had sacrificed in the great world war, it gave me a sense of the wistful quality that is Tony's in spite of his fine strength.

Glad She Came

"I'm glad you came," he said gently.

"I'm proud to have you turn to me in your time of need," I replied.

Tony smiled inscrutably and flung back the shoulders that I've so often seen sag as the one sign that he carries a hard burden.

"I'd turn to a friend like you—in any big hour," he replied. "Will you come along to a sunshiny corner table that's waiting for us?"

Then, as I preceded him and followed the head waiter through a maze of tables, Tony kept up a running fire of remarks that engaged my attention and caused me to keep turning my head to answer him.

So I didn't see Carlotta until we were right at the table. With the quick chivalry that has an engaging, boyish quality, Carlotta sprang to her feet to greet me. Her face was glowing. I've never seen her more warm and vital and less flamboyant. She was tender and Tony was proud. Suddenly I realized all that this might mean. I looked from one to the other and I felt my eyes getting misty. So I sat down quickly and blinked at the luncheon for a second.

At once each of them laid a hand over one of mine.

"You know, dear, even before we tell you," murmured Carlotta.

"Oh, but I want you to tell me!" cried.

Carlotta Laughed

Carlotta laughed. There was the rich satisfaction of complete fulfillment in her laugh.

"Tony, I'll like you to say it," she murmured.

"I'm ready to get up and tell the whole room," temporized Tony, using the words to get time to control himself. "Anne, I know how glad you are for us. I know that you realize how right this is. We love each other. We're going to be married, very soon. I'm so proud that I feel as if I were—strutting even when I sit here quietly!"

Again Carlotta laughed. There was so much ringing warmth in her laughter that I think every one who heard it must have realized that as far as she is concerned "all's right with the world."

"Next after us I believe you're the happiest person in the world today, Anne," she said. "You've wanted this from about the minute we wanted it. You're the first person to know. It's your beautiful secret as well as ours. We're happy to give you a share."

"You dear things!" I cried. "I think this is the loveliest thing in the world. I couldn't be more pleased. Nothing could be more splendid. You're so eternally right for each other. It's beautiful! You will be happier every minute. And you're so happy now that there doesn't seem a thing to wish you. I've even forgot whether or not it's proper to congratulate the bride."

I was trying to keep on the surface of my emotions. Marriage between Carlotta and Tony had been such a dream of my heart that now that I saw it coming true I didn't know how to take it sanely and calmly. I wanted to shout and hug them both and make a complete idiot of myself. Something warm and protective in their smiles told me they knew how topsy turvy and explosively delighted I felt.

We sat and grinned at each other for a minute or two. Then Carlotta said sanely:

"We've all our lives ahead to be happy in. And starving Anne isn't a nice way to thank her for making us overcome all our nonsensical scruples and take what we want so much. Let's permit her to eat this grapefruit supreme."

"We permit you," said Tony, gaily flourishing his spoon.

So in the homely business of eating we got around to a more or less excited discussion of the future. Carlotta wanted a big wedding. I know well enough that this was the last thing Tony would have chosen. But I saw his delight in sacrificing his conservation for her. And she was so proud of him that it didn't occur to her not to take all the world into her confidence and invite it to her wedding so it could see for itself what a lucky girl she was.

Seeing himself through her eyes Tony would never again be able to visualize himself as "an old hulk." As for Carlotta, now that she'd acknowledged her need of him, she wasn't likely ever again to worry about his duty to Betty or any one else. She put it tersely and after her own fashion:

"All the tottering friends who seemed to have first claim on Tony's time and attention appear to be making good in the business world. Well, they can have the business world. I want mine. And that's sitting at the head of Tony's table."

"Isn't she glorious?" asked Tony, pleasantly commonplace and normal in his expression of love.

"She is," I agreed gravely. "And to save Carlotta the trouble of asking, I'll add that you also are—glorious."

Many Plans.

They both laughed good-naturedly and Carlotta plunged ahead to tell me of her plans. She wanted to have a very big wedding at the old Sturges home and then to move out of it bag and baggage to Tony's country store.

"I want to be one hundred per cent. wife," she announced. "And for a start, I'm going to be a white satin and tulle and orange blossoms bride. And you're to be my one attendant—my Lilac Lady again, dear. Jim is a wonderful orchid color dress with masses of pink and lavender flowers in your arms. Won't that be sweet?"

"Your lovely to think of it—" I began.

Carlotta sensed the hesitation in my tone.

"You mustn't refuse, dear," she said. "When my father went—you made me see that most clearly in the heart, not in the color of the clothes. I need you to—be there with me—I'd be so alone—if you didn't. And I don't want to go to Tony out of my seeming lonelinesss. I want to go—gloriously."

My eyes met Tony's. We both felt there was a superb quality in Carlotta's wish to give royally.

"Of course, dear. I'll be your matron of honor," I said. "I belong in the heart of this wedding. You're my particular bride and groom. I'm proud to have you want me with you."

There was nothing else I could do. But my heart sank at the thought of trying to make Jim see it.

After my lunch with Carlotta and Tony, I hurried over to Jim's office. I wanted to let him have the satisfaction of hearing of the engagement before even Pat and Neal knew.

But when I passed through the anteroom to Jim's private office, he wasn't there to greet me. Instead, Rosa looked up with her mocking smile and waved to me across the desk Mabel occupied while Jim was away.

"Hullo, White Lilac," chuckled Rosa. "To what is it I—how you say—owe the honor of this visit?"

"I came to see Jim," I replied with the sheer simplicity that seems to be my only defence against Rosa.

"But this is no longer his office. He have resign it to me. His office is at the other end of the main room. Is Jaime not attentive to me?"

"He is always chivalrous," I replied, and Rosa pounced on the correction.

"Chivalrous—yes, that is what I would say. It means nice to all women. Is it not? And how I say 'attentive' makes it so as if he does this only for little Rosa. Thank you for telling me."

New Hearts for Old

DRAWN BY POPINI

Copyright, 1923, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

THE whole world seems to wabble and the earth to shake when hearts that thought themselves made for each other fly asunder and fall and break. To those who never really loved—who know not that their love was only playing at love—such a happening is inevitable. Isn't this the reason hearts are so often caught on the rebound?

Assuredly, this is why Cupid is never far away. Like the old pedlar who used to appear with a new shoelace the instant your shoelace broke, Cupid swings down the Road of Broken Hearts, crying:

"New hearts for old! Lift up your heads, oh, you who were never made for each other! Dry your eyes so you may wisely choose THIS time!"

ROMANCE OF JEWELS

—By Barbara Bayne—

The Famous Du Barry Diamond

THE most historic necklace in the world, around which clustered romance, intrigue and tragedy, was the diamond necklace ordered by Louis XV for his favorite, Madame du Barry.

His death and the expulsion of Du Barry from court while it was still in the hands of Boehmer, the court jeweler, started an intrigue which involved Queen Marie Antoinette and ended with the overturning of the throne and the fall of her head into the basket on the guillotine.

Briefly told, the Comtesse de la Motte informed Cardinal de Rohan that the Queen desired him to assist her to acquire the necklace, to be paid for by installments. The intrigueing then arranged a secret meeting in the gardens of Versailles.

The pretty handed the necklace over to a muffled figure, who he supposed was Marie Antoinette, but who was the Comtesse. She sent it to an accomplice in England. There the diamonds, taken from their mountings, were sold separately.

When Boehmer presented his bill, the Queen disclaimed all knowledge of the matter. In the trial which ensued Cardinal de Rohan was acquitted of intended complicity and the Queen proved innocent, though the populace still believed in her guilt.

The Comtesse, found guilty, was branded on the shoulder with the letter V and imprisoned, escaping to England, where she was accidentally killed. The unfortunate affair undoubtly helped to the Queen's tragic end.

The stones of the historic necklace, valued at 100,000 pounds, are scattered over the world. What a pity that each one cannot whisper to its owner that it is a fragment of tragic history!

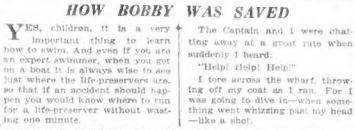
Something in That

When Molly spent her wages on New clothes she got the dickens;
"Why, mother dear," said Molly then,
"The feathers make fine chickens."

FOXY GRANDPA STORY

HOW BOBBY WAS SAVED

YES, children, it is a very important thing to learn how to swim. And even if you are an expert swimmer, when you get on a boat it is always wise to see just where the life-preservers are, so that if an accident should happen you would know where to run for a life-preserver without wasting one minute.



© 1923 by International Feature Service, Inc.

I tell you, our little friend Bobby learned to swim in a hurry after an experience he had.

Well, it happened in this way:

I had an old friend—a retired sea captain—by the name of Captain Corson. He was a great old fellow and had been all over the world. We used to love to visit him and hear his tales of adventure.

One day Bunny, Bobby and I were visiting him! And what a pleasant time we had.

Bunny and Bobby had great fun with a poll-parrot the Captain had brought from South America. And their eyes nearly popped out of their heads as the Captain told yarn after yarn.

After a while, Bunny and Bobby ran down to the wharf in front of the house.

The Captain and I were chatting away at a great rate when suddenly I heard:

"Help! Help! Help!"

I tore across the wharf, throwing off my coat as I ran. For I was going to dive in—when something went whizzing past my head—like a shot.

Then the Captain called to Bobby:

"Grab it, Bobby! Hold tight to it. It'll keep you afloat till Foxy Grandpa swims to you."

Sure enough Bobby grabbed it. He clung to his life preserver until I swam out to him and brought him safely to the wharf.

What was the life preserver? Guess.

It was Captain Corson's cork leg.

Wedding Rehearsals

DEAR MRS. BEEKMAN:

My little girl three years old has been chosen to act as flower girl at a wedding, and my five-year-old son as page boy. The bride lives out of town. She will be unable to rehearse. I would like you to inform me just what is expected in their attentions to the bride as I would like to rehearse them. MRS. J. D. S.

YOUR little girl, who is to be the flower girl, walks in the bridal procession after the maid-of-honor or the matron-of-honor. The page walks after the bride and her father, and holds up the bride's train.

When the occasion arrives at the foot of the chancel the flower girl takes her position behind the maid-of-honor, and the page follows the bride and groom, again having as his service the holding up of the train.

I hope that the bride will find it convenient to rehearse the flower girl and the page, for without rehearsal it is difficul for such young children to measure the distance they are to maintain from the ones in front. Perhaps you can play or hum the wedding march and teach them to keep step to the music.

DR. TRUE'S ELIXIR HAS BEEN USED FOR OVER SEVENTY YEARS

Mothers: Read what this Woman did for Her Children

Mrs. Bradley and Children

Mrs. Alexander Bradley of Danbury, Conn., says: "After 14 long years trying different remedies I have at last found a good medicine—Dr. True's Elixir. I was nearly discouraged. I was giving the oldest girl something nearly every night, but now I keep a bottle of Dr. True's Elixir handy, and only give it occasionally. I have tried so many things, but now as soon as I see signs of worms I give Dr. True's Elixir for quick relief."

In another letter Mrs. Bradley writes: "My son, 14 years of age, was always troubled with worms when small and Dr. True's was unknown to me then. I always have it on hand now. Now please print this letter so other anxious mothers may know the good results which follow Dr. True's Elixir for children suffering with worms and constipation, as I cannot recommend it too highly."

A mother of six children writes: "My baby was very sick and a friend of mine suggested trying Dr. True's Elixir. Now I have six children and am never without Dr. True's Elixir, the True Family Laxative and Worm Expeller, in my house."—Mrs. B. N. Gile, West Newbury, Mass.

Dr. True's Elixir contains imported herbs of strictly pure quality. Insist on this family laxative.

Mrs. H. N. Roberts, 501 Asylum St., Flint, Mich., wrote: "My little girl is relieved of her worms." And in a later letter wrote: "Baby is fine and it was your medicine, Dr. True's Elixir, the True Family Laxative and Worm Expeller, that helped her."

Worms are quickly driven out of the system and good health restored if you use Dr. True's Elixir.

IF MOTHERS ONLY KNEW!

THOUSANDS OF CHILDREN SUFFER FROM WORMS AND THEIR MOTHERS DO NOT KNOW WHAT THE TROUBLE IS

Look at your child NOW. If you have the least suspicion that any of these symptoms are reflected in any of your children, start giving Dr. True's Elixir at once. Signs of Worms are: Constipation, deranged stomach, swollen upper lip, offensive breath, hard and full stomach with pains, pale faces, eyes heavy, and dull, short, dry cough, grinding of the teeth, tongue coated and covered with little red points, starting during sleep with troublesome dreams, slow fever.

Mothers—Dr. True's Elixir has been given children for four generations and it truly corrects child ailments. Try a bottle today. It is good for adults, too.

Mrs. William G. Bonin of Caddo, Oklahoma, says: "We used Dr. True's Elixir for our children for the last 12 years and certainly know the value of it." You can buy Dr. True's Elixir wherever medicine is sold. Pleasant tasting—gentle acting.

Mrs. Henry Johnson of 820 West Hayward Ave., Baltimore, says: "I have bought Dr. True's Elixir for over 10 years and know it is good." She uses it to rid her children of worms.

Mrs. Anselme Lamarre, 29 State St., Sanford, Me., wrote: "My daughter, Gertrude, had dizzy spells and could not even go out, for she always complained of being sick. She used your worm expeller. She never had any fits since. I feel very grateful to you."

Women, Please Be Sensible About Your Hats

You Are Not Mushrooms; Don t Wear Mushroom Hats

Copyright, 1923, Star Company

Woman, in her hours of ease, everlastingly striving for something new, and too frequently achieving something foolish, now decorates and disfigures herself with the mushroom hat.

It comes down over her face, covering up eyes and forehead, which means hiding the INTELLECTUAL part of the face, the part that is worth while.

Sometimes women with intelligence have plastered their hair down on their foreheads, to make themselves look like marmosets, or playful chimpanzees. Not satisfied with that, they now have a mushroom hat that covers the eyes as well as the forehead. All you see is the end of the nose, and a mouth and a chin sticking out.

Woman covers up with that foolish hat, the intellectual upper side of the face which represents the evolution of ten thousand centuries. And she exhibits for your admiration the mouth, chin and teeth inherited from the squirrel and the mouse.

Those mushroom hats might better be called toadstool hats, for aesthetically they are poisonous. They hide and kill that which is beautiful in a woman's face, revealing only that which is of the least importance, the practical machinery devoted to chewing food.

Ladies, please believe that the upper part of your head, which develops thought, is more attractive and more important and better worth seeing than the chewing machinery below.

Everybody knows that in your striving for change you are working out some wise plan of Providence.

When you exhaust your intellect finding exactly the right shade of green stockings to match your green dress or exactly the kind of monkey fur to suit what you call your "temperament," you are obeying a wisdom far above your own.

BUT TRY TO BE SENSIBLE.

Pull your hair straight back from your forehead. Hair is an animal product. Let your eyes and your forehead be seen. It is too much probably at this time to ask you not to paint your cheeks and smear your lips with red like the barbarian, but don't hide your forehead and your eyes with a mushroom hat, concealing from the world all signs of intellect and the future hope that lies in intellect.

Make your mushroom hat into a flower pot, or cut off from it the edge that hides the upper part of your face. Fasten a ribbon around it to hide the cut, and let the ribbon hang down your back. Thus the hat then won't be entirely wasted. Be aesthetic—monkey fur is bad enough. The mushroom hat, so much lower in evolution's scale, is worse.

Terrible! Terrible!!

Robbing Wall Street, That's Going Too Far

Copyright, 1923, Star Company

Clever swindlers stole a little money from Wall Street, through forged orders. The whole thing amounted to a few hundred thousand dollars, mere "chicken feed" down there.

But nation, State and city are jointly hunting the "dangerous criminals" that dare invade the sanctity of Wall Street.

Every day swindlers are stealing the savings of little people, taking from widows and their children the money saved and left by a dead man—and no one seems much excited about that. OIL, MINE, LAND, STOCK swindlers, all prosper. The old Marseilles pedlar that left his little savings to Rothschild said in his will: "Money goes to money." He might have added that government assistance also goes to money—when it is BIG money.

Good-Bye, Poor Mammals

You Were Doomed, Anyhow

Copyright, 1923, Star Company

Professor Osborn, head of the big American Museum of Natural History, a most earnest, valuable student and teacher, says that farmers and fashion combined will soon kill off the beautiful, interesting mammals of the globe. Therefore the museum eagerly presses its pursuit of fine specimens, in order before they become extinct to make complete collections.

FASHION wants the fur and feathers, FARMERS want the bones for fertilizer. Fashion, stupid and dull, now demands furs for Summer, as well as Winter.

Cheap firearms and high fur prices have set all Asia and Australia to hunting, and soon wild mammals will be a memory.

It had to come eventually. For man will one day be THE ONLY LIVING animal on the planet, all consciousness will be centred in him, a good thing for his animal brothers. But what will the future Roosevelts have to shoot—especially if war dies out, when the mammals vanish? Nothing to kill—a dreary world.

It Would Puzzle a Queen

Or Any Solemn Lady

Copyright, 1923, Star Company

When Lady Spencer, whose husband had the fine big house in the Quorn country, came visiting the States, she saw strange things, including seven little plates of different vegetables arranged around her big plate at dinner. Said she to her lord:

"I only ask you, Spencer, WHAT does it mean?"

Queen Mary may have said the same thing to King George in Rome the other day. She visited the Italian King, met the Pope, and her husband talked in private with Mussolini, who probably told him: "I am boss, not the Pope or the King."

The Pope is in the Vatican, the King is in his palace, and Mussolini is everywhere. It is enough to puzzle a good Queen.

The King wore his full uniform of a British Field Marshal, and that is all he has to do. The English, especially, DON'T want him to think.

BEAUTY OF CO-EDS PROBED

BERKELEY, Cal., May 14—Beauty secrets of the fair coeds are the latest subject for analysis and experimentation by the male students of the mining and metallurgy department of the University of California.

Red earth, the principal constituent of rouge, is 60 per cent. iron, according to Albert Brinkman, a sophomore student in the class.

"Have you had your iron today?" has particular significance on the campus now.

THE VOICE OF NEW ENGLAND

No Attention Paid to Anonymous Communications

A Red Flag

Editor Boston American:

An Edison red flag flying in front of a large South End apartment house caused a good deal of interest last Friday. The street had not been dug up, and the wind was blowing in such a way that the letters of the company could not be seen by a person coming down the sidewalk. Several stopped, looked up at the house and then walked around the flag to see what it meant. One man laughed and said he thought the building was quarantined. Why not have lettering on both sides of the flag? A plain piece of red bunting may mean many disagreeable things.

Revising Commandments

Editor Boston American:

So England is at it again in revising the so-called old-fashioned ten commandments. Why all this meddling against humble and old-fashioned traits? The people will not live up to the new revision any better than they are living up to it now.

THE HELPING HAND

Do Not Inclose Stamps. Letters Will Not Be Answered Personally. No Attention Paid to Telephone Calls. No Names Are Published.

Clothes for Girl

Editor Helping Hand:

In doing my housecleaning I came across quite a few things for a girl between fifteen and sixteen. I wonder if you could place them, as my girl has outgrown them? Also send me the name of the woman who wants stockings for rugs, as I have fifteen or twenty pairs, all colors.

MRS. F. H. K.

ED. NOTE—You will be sent the address of Mrs. J. M. H. M., who wanted cloth for rugs, and with Mrs. R. K. M., who can use most of the things you mention in the list. (She wears size 46 or 52 and has a girl fifteen.) If she does not need all you mention, will you let us know, so that we can send you the name of someone else? Thank you.

Needs a Suit

Editor Helping Hand:

I am a widow sixty-five years old, without means, and pretty much of an invalid, but could go out if I had something to wear. I wonder if some kind person has a dark suit or a couple of house dresses, sizes 48 to 52, or shirtwaists? I would be grateful for anything, as I am sorry to say I am destitute.

M. C. H.

Offers Much Help

Editor Helping Hand:

Thank you for forwarding me Mrs. S. H.'s address. She also wrote to me, and I am sending her a box by parcel post today for the children—with a second one for herself in a few days from a friend whose interest I have aroused. Now I wish you would send me Mrs. M. H.'s address, as I have some blouses from my eleven-year-old boy which ought to be all right to fit her ten-year-old son. Also some prospective mother's address, as I have a few tiny garments which might help ride someone to better things. This might help Mrs. E. M. S. Also someone's address who uses pieces for patchwork. I have a real good pair of small child's shoes to fit a child nearly two years old with tan rubbers to fit, both in very good condition. I also have a few boys' books for a boy around twelve or thirteen.

MRS. A. M.

ED. NOTE—Many thanks for all you have done and are doing. Mrs. E. M. S has been provided for, so we will send you Mrs. C. F. M.'s address for the baby clothes, together with Mrs. M. H.'s address. The patchwork pieces, the shoes and the books will all be very welcome somewhere, and they will be held for replies.

Crib and Mattress

Editor Helping Hand:

I have a baby's crib and mattress, a nursery chair and some baby clothes and some clothes to fit a size 16.

MRS. J. N. W.

ED. NOTE—Mrs. J. D. P. is in urgent need of a crib, and her address will be sent you. We couldn't find one family for the remainder of the clothes, so suggest you send the baby clothes to Mrs. E. H. and the others to Mrs. E. R. H. These addresses will be sent you also. Many thanks.

Needs Twin Carriage

We wish to thank you for your kind interest and also to ask you to thank the parties, whoever they may be, for the baby clothes sent to me. If you happen to hear of a twin carriage, would you kindly remember us. Many thanks.

MRS. J. H. P.

ED. NOTE—The baby clothes were sent anonymously to the Boston American. Incidentally, we think it would be better if the generous readers would not send packages to the American, but would hold them for the name of someone in need. This gives the personal touch on the part of the giver that is often half the gift.

Gives Much Help

Editor Helping Hand:

I would like the address of Mrs. J. M. H. M., the widow of seventy, who wishes things to braid rugs. Also Mrs. G. E. D. I have what she asked for and would be glad to help. You are certainly doing wonderful work and only wish I could do more.

MRS. A. O.

ED. NOTE—We hear from you so often with offers of help that I guess you are doing more already than most of our readers. We like to find your handwriting on one of the envelopes when we go over the mail in the morning. The addresses you request will be sent you. Many thanks.

Boy Never Walked

Editor Helping Hand:

I have a boy eight years old who has never walked, and the doctor says that he will never be able to. I am a widow and have three more children to support from ten to two years old. I am keeping a small rooming house for my support, but it only gives me enough to live on. I would be very pleased to get someone to give my boy a wheel chair so he could go out and get a little sunshine. I cannot afford to buy him one.

MRS. E. O.

Young Couple In Need

Editor Helping Hand:

I am a young married man, and my wife and baby boy, five months old, are badly in need of clothes. I have to wear my old overalls, as I haven't a pair of trousers to put on. My wife has been very sick during the past two weeks, and I have suffered considerably with my eyes. I have been told by specialists that there is no hope of curing my eye trouble. I am 'way in debt through sickness and cannot afford to buy any clothes. I am five feet five inches tall, and my wife is five feet four, both medium build.

E. H. 2.

Please Send Name

Editor Helping Hand:

If Louise would get in touch with me, I have a nice blue taffeta dress that I would be glad to let her have. I also have some good looking hats for somebody.

E. M. A.

ED. NOTE—Won't you please send us your name and address? We failed to find anything but the above initials in your letter.

All Need Clothes

Editor Helping Hand:

My husband has been sick now for three months, and is not able to go back to his old job yet. He does a little now, but not much. I have four children, the oldest a girl fourteen, who has heart trouble; a girl twelve, a boy eleven, and a boy two and a half. They all need clothes and shoes badly, as do my husband and myself. I would like to get a place to go to work cleaning or anything else two or three days a week to help, as we owe many bills.

WATCH THE PAPERS HISTORY'S HOPPING THESE DAYS

By Herbert Kaufman

THE Columbia University professor, who unblushingly confessed he never reads the papers, is badly out of tune with the times, unless he has kept track of the past fortnight's events.

Put a ring around May and paste its developments in memory's scrapbook. History is hopping these days.

China, after running in circles for twenty years, heads pell mell back to international management.

The Aldrich kidnaping case forecasts a second march on Pekin. A good thing for the Chinese and civilization, too, if the powers are forced to intervene. That bandit crew may yet be celebrated as national saviors.

Poincare's ruthless tactics provoke Britain to assail the Versailles Treaty and press for its abrogation. Ex-Premier Asquith excoriates the Saar Basin scandal, Lord Cecil supports his views and Lloyd George hurrahs encouragement.

Vorovosky, Moscow's self-invited observer, is assassinated at Lausanne just at the critical moment of Anglo-Russian relations.

Switzerland, after standing for decades on the sidelines of European affairs, is at last in trouble. Moscow cuts another notch on Hate's tally, but how the Soviets ever expect to spank the Alps is a present mystery.

Meanwhile, Curzon's ultimatum (with a battleship on the side) both procures the release of a captive North Sea trawler and incites attack on the Cabinet by Russophile-Labor members.

Atlas has nothing on Bonar Law.

Quite a Row of Legal Mile-Stones

Supreme Court opinion waves the Volstead act away from the three-mile limit and establishes an offshore bar around these United States.

A Federal judge decides that prohibition must exclude medical liquor prescriptions and Albany repeals the Mullen-Gage Enforcement act. A decidedly bad round for blue noses.

Minnesota validates her ore royalty statute and pockets an overdue $5,000,000 from local mining companies.

The tax exempt building law is sustained on appeal, and bankrupts forever lose the right to withhold books and records from examination. Quite a row of legal mile-stones!

The Sugar Exchange shrewdly employs ex-Ambassador Davis and wins its bout against Attorney-General Daugherty, who immediately files a brief against individual speculators.

The government isn't making much headway, but housewives are doing better. Boycott's the thing to knock profiteers off their high perch.

The high and mighty "American Plan" gets a trouncing in Missouri, which warms the hearts of traveling men generally, by deciding that hotels can't force guests to pay for meals they haven't eaten.

Watch the news and put money in your pocket.

Crumbs and Straws and Flivver Banks

Pennsylvania inaugurates old-age pensions. Indigent folk of seventy and beyond will receive a dollar a day from the common purse.

The Legislature, however, rather empties its philanthropic gesture by starting with a $25,000 appropriation.

Crumbs, though, are better than nothing.

If only the State had reserved its coal and petroleum fields for common benefit, what a sum would now be at hand for the care of the penniless and other community wards! Wiser generations will be cannier stewards of national resources.

Standard Oil of New Jersey announces an increase of $1,000,000 over 1922 earnings—a straw which shows how some winds are blowing. And also one apt to break a certain camel's back.

Henry Ford starts a chain of flivver banks to finance his pay-as-you-drive purchase plan. Every time he sells a car there's another voter to inquire why gasoline is so high and support restraining measures for hog-it-all corporations.

Bad for the Golden Egg Crop

A Pasadena scientist moves into the spotlight with a new ray which permits photography through a foot of lead and six inches of steel, discloses the mystery of electricity and lightens the weight of metal.

Postmaster-General New discovers a ray of hope in the Treasury's mounting surplus, which should indicate lighter taxes.

Whereupon Secretary Mellon asserts that incomes are likely to stagger indefinitely under present schedules, and this in face of a conviction that prosperity is on a sound footing, prices at maximum level and Federal Reserve rediscount rates unlikely to advance. Somebody's miscalculating.

Capital has its back up. All sorts of construction ventures are halted by impossible union demands.

Statler tells how plasterers compelled him to pay $108 a week before he could finish his new Buffalo hotel. The golden egg crop won't reach predicted figures if this goose-killing keeps up. Oh for a ray that will penetrate boneheads!

Here, There and Everywhere

Lightning cuts Eiffel Tower cables and puts radio out of business. We can't expect to seize the heavens without an occasional protest from hitherto reigning forces.

Barbot's extraordinary performance and our own transcontinental flight record stirs British pride to offer a quarter of a million dollars in prizes for a successful vertical flying machine.

Before tomorrow can say "Jack Robinson" man will be riding the winds in greater safety than he now spins along his roads. Pandora's chest hasn't many secrets left.

Human cussedness, though, continues to defy understanding. Brooklyn vandals break open and desecrate the tomb of Revolutionary martyrs.

Dr. Carroll, who has eternalized life in a chicken cell, would confer a greater benefit upon society if he could locate the particular brain cell that inspires such insanity.

The Grand Jury investigating Leighton Mount's death at Northwestern University is expected to return a verdict of murder.

Sad business for everybody.

So is the high school class rush at Niagara Falls, which left one lad seriously stabbed and landed twenty others in jail.

Education must clear its skirts of rowdyism or we'll have a fine young generation to deal with.

But there's always a bit of rainbow in the news to hearten faith. Bernard Tansey, an eighteen-year-old boy confesses to highway robbery so that his elder brother may escape punishment. Love and devotion and self-sacrifice do rule the world after all.
